HUNDREDS PERISH AT SEA AS BOLT SETS SHIP AFIRE IN JERSEY COAST STORM

Today

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

NO IMPORTANT news about the strike up to six o'clock yesterday, when this was written, except that 100,000 garment workers may walk out on October 1.

One of the best known business men in the country said yesterday:

"Business is actually in a state of terror. What do you suppose it is that frightens business men just now? The biggest kind of war would not create the fear that exists among the country's important business executives."

What men do not understand shakes their resolution. Macbeth was a brave Scotchman, but you remember what he said, when the ghost suddenly appeared in the banquet hall:

What man dare, I dare:
Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,
The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger—
Take any shape but that, and my Firm nerves
Shall never tremble.

To that he added:

Hence, horrible shadow!
Unreal mockery, hence!

Advance upon the American business man like the hyrcan tiger, or any of those animals, and he will not blench. But, when, on one side, a little red mouse waves a red flag, singing: "Arise, ye Prisoners of Starvation!" and on the other side a big, fierce administration says "We'll feed the strikers as long as they strike," your poor business man can only exclaim: "Hence, horrible shadow! Unreal mockery, hence!" and, for the time being, alas, it refuses to "hence."

MRS. EVA COO, 47 years old, and Mrs. Martha Clift, younger, kissed each other good-bye at the jail door in Cooperstown, N. Y. Mrs. Coo went by automobile to Sing Sing, where she will be killed in the electric chair; Mrs. Clift, in another direction, to a woman's prison to spend "20 years to life."

Between them, according to a jury's decision, they murdered a lame man, Harry Wright, to collect insurance policies on his life taken out by Mrs. Coo, with herself as beneficiary.

Not very long before, in the same chamber, Mrs. Ruth Snyder was killed for helping a gentleman to murder her husband with a sash weight, for insurance.

Murder to collect insurance is a most dangerous crime. The motive is so clear, murderers should remember that.

Mrs. Coo says, "I am not afraid to burn," meaning not afraid to sit in the electric chair; and she forgives Martha Clift, who, to save her own life, testified against her friend.

But Mrs. Coo is "a little disappointed in human nature."

Perhaps the poor, lame "handyman," knocked on the head by Mrs. Coo with a heavy mallet, and repeatedly run over by an automobile driven by Mrs. Clift to make death seem natural, was also disappointed in human nature.

There is no doubt that Mrs. Snyder, Mrs. Antonio and Mrs. Coo deserved their fate, Mrs. Antonio less guilty than the others, since her husband treated her cruelly and was a peddler of drugs.

The question is, does the state deserve the disgrace of putting women to death when it isn't necessary; imitating the murderess in her murderous process?

NEW YORK STATE'S electric executioner made "another $150" Thursday night by killing Alphonse Brengard.

Brengard's death, delayed for a few days, would not be worth mentioning except that, whereas a criminal is usually wheeled out of the death room a corpse two minutes after he enters the room, it took six minutes to kill Brengard.

The latter, a powerful former state trooper, with big muscles, had to wait six minutes for broken straps in "the chair" to be mended. Brengard kept his eyes fixed on a crucifix held by Father John McCaffery, the prison chaplain, and never flinched.

Willingness "to burn," or calm

SLEEPING PASSENGERS TRAPPED; BODIES WASHED ASHORE

SPRING LAKE, N. J., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Fire—the seaman's worst enemy—took a toll of hundreds of lives today on the steamship Morro Castle, of the Ward Line, inbound from Havana.

Estimates of the loss of life among the passenger list of 318 and the crew of 240 ran as high as 300.

Scores of the passengers, spending their last night on board before the end of their week's holiday, were trapped below deck as the flames, breaking out in the library in the fore of the boat, raged aft to leave the superstructure only a hulk.

One hundred and eighty-two persons were reported rescued, 87 being picked up at the scene by the steamships Monarch of Bermuda and Andrea F. Luckenback, and another 85 landing along the North Jersey shore from lifeboats.

A bolt of lightning struck an oil tank of the 11,520-ton liner, and fire broke out so quickly, survivors said, that there was little time even to spread the alarm to sleeping passengers.

So far as survivors who arrived here could see, only six lifeboats were able to leave the ship. Most of those who got away were members of the crew.

The catastrophe occurred shortly after 5 a. m. (Pittsburgh time). There was a brief wireless—"SOS, SOS—Morro Castle afire 20 miles south of Scotland Light—fire near wireless room—"

That was all the word that came crackling through the thick night.

The ship's captain, Robert Wilmot, died at sea only a few hours before the lightning struck. The ship at the time of the tragedy was under the command of the chief officer, W. F. Warms.

Coast Guard craft along the Jersey Coast put out immediately in the rough sea for the escene. Liners in the vicinity turned about and raced to the place, marked by a ball of fire through the thick weather.

The lifeboats landed here. Several of the occupants were hurried to hospitals. The nature of their injuries were not immediately determinable.

MANY TOURISTS ABOARD

The Morro Castle was returning from an eight-day cruise to Havana. Among her passengers when she left New York September 1 were 100 members of the Concordia Singing Society of New York.

Capt. Wilmot, who was in command of the ship, a craft built in 1930 and 508 feet long, suffered a heart attack last night. His death occurred shortly afterward, and Chief Officer Warms immediately took charge.

More than 100 survivors of the ship, passengers and crew, were landed at Seagirt shortly after dawn. All were in lifeboats of the Morro Castle.

The Marine Observer at Sandy Hook reported about 10:30 A. M. (Pittsburgh time) that the Sandy Hook Coast Guard Station said several persons were visible in the water off the beach, some apparently alive.

Every effort was being made to get lifeboats to them, the report said.

BODIES WASHED ASHORE

Bodies of some of those who perished in the fire were being washed up soon after daylight.

Coast Guards at Allenhurst said they had reports of numerous bodies found along the shore. The northeast storm and a heavy low-lying fog cut visibility to a minimum.

One sailor who landed at Spring Lake said that all midships was ablaze when the fire alarm was sounded and it was impossible to go through the aisles to arouse the passengers.

Sailors ran around the decks, smashing cabin windows, to awaken sleepers, he said.

The entire Jersey Coast was alive with activity, the Coast Guard shooting their motor craft out as soon as word of the SOS reached them. The sea, however, was too rough for surf boats.

MANY INJURED

None of the Coast Guard boats had returned at the time of the arrival of the survivors at Seagirt and Spring Lake.

Fifteen or 20 of those who came ashore were taken to hospitals for treatment for minor injuries.

Ambulances and first aid equipment from all along the North Jersey Coast were rushed to this vicinity to care for the survivors.

The names of survivors first obtained were:

Mrs. Renee Mendez Capote, of the Department of Public Education, Havana.

Miss Florence Roberts, of Pawtucket, R. I.

A Miss Conway, of Brooklyn.

Borne in by the heavy northeast storm the lifeboats were

LINK OFFICERS IN ROBBERY

Three Braddock policeman and three other men were declared by state police to have confessed to participating in the robbery of a Braddock shoe store.

Two of the policemen, according to the troopers, admitted to acting as "lookouts" while the others entered the store and stole a quantity of shoes and hosiery. Some of the loot was said to have been recovered.

Those held at the Greensburg state police barracks in connection with the case are Patrol Driver Peter J. McKelvey, 32, and Patrolmen Thomas J. Meehan, 36, and Philip Cognita, 26, all of Braddock; and William E. Murphy, 45, of Braddock; and Patrick J. Lacey, 38, of Oakland; and Joseph Ridge, 38, of Wilkinsburg.

Lacey and Ridge are said to be small-time politicians. Ridge recently appealed a conviction in a federal vote fraud case.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park asked the state police to make an investigation following six maor robberies in Braddock which went unsolved. All were within a few blocks of the Braddock Police Station.

Russ Columbo Left But $20,000; No Will

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Russ Columbo died leaving the comparatively modest estate of $20,000, it was disclosed today by the attorney for the singer. Columbo was accidentally slain last Sunday by an "unloaded" pistol.

The singer left no will, and those sharing in the estate will be Columbo's father and mother, his three brothers, and his two sisters.

Oil Worker, Wife Found Slain in Ditch

EL DORADO, Kan., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—The bodies of Frank Kelly, 25, an oil worker, and his wife, 20, were found last night in a concrete culvert eight miles west of Augusta, their throats cut from ear to ear.

Police immediately began questioning Clifford Kelly, brother of Frank, who, Police Chief Charles Parton, said, was involved in a fight with Frank, Saturday night.

MISS EDITH THOMPSON . . . . . SHE CHANGED HER MIND

Miss Thompson, Pittsburgh girl who escaped the horror of the Morro Castle tragedy because she changed her plans, remained in Bermuda to take a later boat for her return to New York City.

Canceled Ship Booking Saves Pittsburgh Girl

A woman's prerogative to change her mind saved a Pittsburgh girl from the horrors of the Morro Castle disaster.

Until Wednesday evening, a few hours before the ill-fated ship left the dock at Bermuda, Miss Edith Thompson, of 6 Waldorf street, had booked passage on the Morro Castle, according to her mother, Mrs. William A. Thompson.

For an unexplained reason, Miss Thompson changed her mind and wired her mother:

"Changed my mind am sailing on the eighth on Queen."

Shocked by the narrowness of her daughter's escape, the mother said:

"I only hope she didn't change her mind again. I can't imagine what caused her to change her plans in the first place, but we surely are happy that she escaped that horror.

"It's strange too, because last summer Edith made the trip to Bermuda on the Morro Castle."

Miss Thompson had intended to return to New York Wednesday and spend the weekend in that city, her mother said.

G. O. P. ADOPTS PLATFORM HERE

BULLETIN.

Senator David A. Reed was elected by acclamation to succeed the late William S. Vare, of Philadelphia, as the Republican National Committeeman for Pennsylvania at the meeting of the state central committee here today.

The Republican State Committee meeting in the William Penn Hotel today, adopted a platform for the November election attacking the Democratic administration, and was expected to ratify a resolution repudiating the candidacy of Dr. Joseph G. Steedle for re-election to the Legislature unless he withdraws.

The platform declared for a constitutional convention "when feasible," at the same finding that in many respects the present state Constitution is "obsolete." A commission to study unemployment insurance is urged, though no stand is taken on the principle.

Minimum wage and hour legislation for women are advocated, and permanent registration throughout the state is approved.

DUPLICATION ATTACKED

Co-operation between state and local police is advised, without interference in the authority of municipal authorities. Duplication of government is attacked, and an important declaration calls for the right of municipalities to fix the pay and number of its employes. On this subject the platform says:

"The local authorities required to raise the revenues should

Taxi Driver Causes Policeman's Arrest

Ralph Barton, 38, of 3612 Center avenue, acting sergeant at the Penn avenue police station and magistrate's clerk there, was arrested today by Lieut. Edward Arthurs of the Oakland police, on a disorderly conduct charge.

Lieut. Arthurs said Barton became involved in an argument with Frank Sternitzke, 34, of Sharpsburg, a taxicab driver, at Center avenue and Craig street. Sternitzke was also arrested.

DONORA COUPLE ON SHIP'S LIST

Two residents of the Pittsburgh district, Dr. and Mrs. H. J. Strauch, of Donora, are believed to have been among the passengers of the ill-fated Morro Castle, which burned off the coast of New Jersey today with a loss of perhaps 200 lives or more.

The Strauchs had booked passage on the Morro Castle through the travel department of the Mellon National Bank last week and were on the passenger list of those who were making the return trip from Havana to New York when the disaster occurred.

An early check of the survivors has not revealed any trace of the young doctor and his wife.

The Strauchs resided at 101 Penn street, Donora. They were married five years ago following a romance which started while rD. Strach was an interne at the West Penn Hospital here.

Three other Pittsburghers were in New York today waiting for the boat to dock so they could board her for the week's cruise to Havana and return.

They are Miss Jean C. Carroll, of the Allegheny General Hospital; Mrs. A. D. Gilbert, of 6340 Aurelia street, and Miss Caroline Ecklund, of 178 Lincoln avenue, Bellevue.

The three women had booked passage on the Morro Castle through the travel department of the First National Bank, to sail from New York at 4 p. m. today.

The Chalfants on the passenger list were not related to the socially prominent Chalfants of Pittsburgh, members of the family said today.

Those included on the passenger list were J. M. Chalfant, II, and Miss L. Chalfant.

beached and willing hands of volunteer workers aided in the unloading.

Those landed here were taken first to police headquarters, where clothing in the possession of the local Red Cross chapter was distributed.

Women of the town quickly organized and started serving hot coffee and food to the men and women.

An indication of the sweep of the storm was given when a power boat from the Manasquan Coast Guard Station was forced to return to Swan Inlet after battling the sea for two hours and getting only one and one-half miles offshore.

Many of those landed were in their night clothing and numbers were suffering from shock and exposure.

RAIN BEATS DOWN

The lifeboats have a capacity of 70 persons, including crews, but the six that are known to have been launched were not filled to capacity. One left with only 12 persons, including the crew.

The rain beat down in torrents, as the wind gained force, but despite the poor visibility the ship ablaze could be plainly seen from shore.

It was not believed the Morro Castle would sink. No one, however, could remain long aboard her and live, survivors believed.

Whether Chief Officer Warms escaped was not immediately ascertained. As lifeboats landed, the survivors in many cases were taken at once to hospitals.

A survivor of the Morro Castle said today that he believed most of the 318 passengers and 240 members of the crew lost their lives when lightning struck the craft eight miles off the Jersey Coast today.

The first survivors were exhausted when they reached the shore and were unable to give clear accounts of the disaster. One said:

"There are plenty in distress out there."

He was unable to say whether there had been any deaths.

A sailor, William O'Sullivan, deck storekeeper, said he was asleep at the time the lightning struck amidships, setting an oil tank ablaze.

Flames spread over the ship swiftly, the storekeeper said, and worked their way up to the boat deck. He said he and other members of the crew went to the stations and then started to fight the flames with fire hose. He said:

"It was impossible to stop the fire. The flames kept coming up and we had to go for the lifeboats."

The SOS sent out came suddenly and ended as quickly. As the wireless operator was attempting to give details of the fire, his message suddenly ceased.

According to one member of the crew, the ship was a roaring furnace amidships by the time he reached deck after being routed from his bunk.

LEAP INTO SEA

"The crew functioned with precision and calmness, he said, as the men took their positions at the lifeboats.

Several persons leaped overboard, one survivor related. He saw only six boats launched, and he doubted if the men on the other side of the ship—toward which the flames were being driven by a 15-mile wind—were able to launch their boats.

The lifeboats remained near the burning ship for nearly half an hour, but no person was seen in the sea.

A hurricane is whipping the Atlantic, and northeast gale warnings have been posted along the coast where the Morro Castle caught fire. The sea was not especially heavy, however, though members of the crews of the lifeboats found it heavy going to pull the eight miles to the Jersey shore.

BODIES SEEN FROM AIR

Bodies started to wash ashore a few hours after the fire and a National Guard airplane observer reported that he had seen several more bodies floating in the sea.

Little time was given immediately to the handling o the bodies, all attention being turned to caring for the exhausted survivors. Ambulances were rushed in; first aid stations were set up; the Red Cross provided clothing and townswomen set about furnishing food and hot drinks.

A few persons were taken to hospitals at Asbury Park and Neptune but so far as could be determined none suffered more serious injuries than cuts, abrasions, exposure and slight burns.

Those who came ashore at Spring Lake, Seagirt and Asbury Park, related a tale of horror.

WATER PRESSURE LOW

Members of the crew, until stopped by officers, told of the deck watch attempting to check the flames alone and calling out the crew only to find low water pressure in the fire hose.

The raging flames, gaining a quick start in the inflammable curtains, drapes, tapestries and heavy rugs in the library, spread so rapidly that the superstructure was in flames from fore to aft before passengers could get up the ladders.

The Morro Castle, which was launched only four years ago, went through 48 hours of turbulence last September when it ran into a hurricane off Cape Hatteras. For two days the ship was buffeted by wind and waves while its radio was unable to communicate with the rest of the world.

IN BRAVER DAYS!

Finally the vessel rode through to safety.

In gratitude for the bravery and seamanship displayed by Capt. Willmott passengers on that trip awarded him a watch and chain last December.

A set of resolutions memorializing the bravery of the captain and the crew, framed and surmounted by a photograph of the ship, was also presented to the captain.

SHIP'S INFERNO DESCRIBED BY SURVIVOR

Passengers Plunged Into Sea; Liner 'Like Furnace'

By WILLIAM O'SULLIVAN
Deck Storekeeper of the Morro Castle

SPRING LAKE, N. J., Sept. 8.—I was asleep when the fire broke out on the Morro Castle this morning, but the fire gong awakened me and I went to my station on the starboard side of the ship.

One of the men told me lightning struck the ship and set an oil tank on fire.

By the time I reached the deck the whole midships was burning, as far up as the boat deck. It seemed that only the after part of the ship was clear.

We tried to fight the fire with hose from the boat deck but it was no use. The flames had such a hold and were burning so fircely that it was impossible to stop them.

Someone shouted to me:

"There's a woman in that room."

I broke into the stateroom and tried to find her, but I couldn't see anybody there and the smoke drove me out.

In all the time we were fighting the fire I don't remember seeing any passengers. Some people jumped overboard, but I don't know if they were passengers or members of the crew.

Most of the passengers and crew were asleep when the lightning struck and I don't see how very many of them were able to escape.

The ship was like a furnace, burning from one end to the other. I tried to see if anybody was on deck, but I couldn't see anybody.

4 HELD IN RAIDS AS NUMBERS 'BIG SHOTS'

7 Others Nabbed After Big Safe Is Moved From Farmhouse

Eleven men, including four described as "big shots," had been arrested today in District Attorney Andrew T. Park's new drive against the numbers racket.

The 11 were involved, Park said, in a lottery operating extensively in the East Boroughs and doing a business estimated between $2,000 and $3,000 daily.

The four reputed to be "big shots" were arrested by county detectives in a raid in Roberts street, in the Hill, early today a few hours after a raid on a farmhouse on McKnight road, where seven men were arrested. Detectives said a large safe removed from the farmhouse to the Hill district, revealing the extensive operations of the alleged ring, was seized.

GRILLED BY PARK

Park questioned the men until 4 a. m. today, but refused to divulge the results of the interrogation. During the questioning Judge William H. McNaugher, presiding judge of Criminal Court, visited the District Attorney's office, but made no comment.

The raid on the farmhouse was made by County Detectives Frank Ritz and Peter Connors, who arrested Patsy Melaragno and confiscated seven adding machines. While Ritz was searching the house, Connors stationed himself in the lane leading to the house and arrested six others as they arrived in automobiles carrying numbers slips and money, he said.

District Attorney Park said the "pick up" men represented possibly 25 to 30 writers, and he believed several escaped the dragnet when they got wind of the raid at the farmhouse.

While detectives lay in wait at the secluded farmhouse four men whom Park described as men high in the racket came to the place, loaded the safe in an automobile, and drove to the Hill district, they reported. The detectives followed and when the safe had been carried into the building they swooped in.

Tired from the long hours of questioning, Park said:

"No place in the county or city is safe. We want to go up, not down from here."

Those held in addition to Melaragno are George Smith, Frank Charrizza, James Gatten, of McKeesport; Patsy Trafincano, James Marino, of McKeesport; Dominic Disterfino, Robert Fischman, Theodore Crystal, Itzel Rogal and Tony Casillio.

Bond for the release of Fischman, Crystal, Rogal and Casillio was set at $5,000 each; for the others $3,000.

Several of the suspects have police records, the District Attorney said.

OTHER NUMBERS ARRESTS

Six persons were arrested on the South Side and two in the downtown as numbers writers, police reported.

Those arrested on the South Side, according to Acting Lieut. John Schaughnessy, were Felice Ricoardi, 38, of 98 Washington place, and two passengers in his automobile, Nick Tobiano, 27, and Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, 27, both of 2811 Brownsville road; George Dohinko, of South Thirteenth street; Sylvester Guzowiski, 26, and his brother, Harry, 28, of 1908 South Eighteenth street extension.

At a shoe-shine establishment at 1013 Liberty avenue, Plainclothesmen Al Miller and James Fay said they arrested Thomas Neile, 40, alleged proprietor, and William Williams, 36, an employe. They were alleged to have had numbers books in their possession.

60 HURT, WAVE HITS FERRY

International News Service.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 8.—About 60 persons were injured, some seriously, when a ferryboat chartered for a moonlight excursion on Lake Ontario was struck by a mysterious tidal wave early today.

About 550 were aboard the ferry, which was approximately 12 miles off shore when the wave struck with considerable force. The passengers were thrown against the boat railings, chairs, tables and other objects and many were hurt.

The rocking of the boat was brief, however, and the panic caused among the passengers was shortlived.

There had been no storm and the cause of the tidal wave was a mystery.

The captain immediately ordered the ferry to put back to shore. The injured were brought to this city in railway coaches and those most seriously hurt were taken to hospitals.

FLAMES SWEEP THROUGH BARN

A large frame barn owned by John Bardona, Butler Plank road, Allison Park, was destroyed by fire which illuminated the district more than an hour last night.

Six horses were rescued and a bus and three automobiles were pulled out of the blazing structure. The flames, of undetermined origin, enveloped the barn when nearby Allison Park firemen arrived. Volunteer firemen from Undercliff and Elfinwild also were summoned. Highway patrolmen were called to handle the traffic jam. The damage was estimated at several thousand dollars.

Baby Coos in Orphanage As Mother Lies Dead

A mother lay dead in an Oakland funeral home today while her infant son cooed happily at the Rosella Foundling Asylum, too recent a visitor into the world to understand the tragedy that marked its birth.

Meanwhile, authorities were attempting to communicate with relatives of the mother in Memphis, Tenn. Before her death she revealed little about herself.

She said her name was Mrs. Julia Davis and that her husband had left her in York, Pa., after they had hitch-hiked from Memphis. At York, she said, she had appealed to the Catholic Charities, which sent her to Pittsburgh.

The woman was given sanctuary in the asylum here two weeks ago. She died yesterday, three days after the child was born.

BONDS FOUGHT BY TAXPAYERS

Under fire from three quarters, the city's proposal for an $8,000,000 people's bond issue is slated for further airing before City Council next week.

At a hearing yesterday, three organizations voiced their protests against another issue of bonds. They were the Building Owners and Managers Association, the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board and the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners and Taxpayers League.

One of the proposals discussed at yesterday's meeting was that for $2,000,000 for improvements at Mayview.

Dr. William H. Mayer, psychiatrist, told of the need for relief from overcrowding. In the mental department of the city home, he said, there was overcrowding to the extent of 650 patients.

Suggestions for taking over the old Allegheny General Hospital building when the new hospital structure is ready were made. Dr. Mayer opposed the plan. The hearing on this phase of the bond issue program will be continued Tuesday morning.

GOES TO BANK, TOLD HE'S DEAD

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—With his frayed savings bank book in hand, Thomas Bresser, 70, walked into a bank here and was told he was legally "dead."

Informed he had no right to withdraw the money, he promised to see his lawyers about it.

By order of Justice A. I. Fisher, of the Provincial Supreme Court, Bresser was presumed "dead" last December. He had last been heard from 12 years ago, Attorney Coy Manzer reported.

At that time, his estate was ordered divided among relatives. Succession duties were paid to the government but the property was not finally distributed.

The elderly man reported he had wandered over the continent, mostly in mining camps. He had $2,200 on deposit, bank officials said.

Ex-Champ Socks Out Few Pointers for Mr. Lavery

Bozo Lavery, bodyguard for Mayor McNair, has polished himself up on the smack 'em and whack 'em art, and when the Mayor returns from Europe, Bozo will probably open His Honor's eyes with a demonstration of the fine points of roughhouse.

JACK DEMPSEY THOMAS LESLIE FINGERPRINTING THE CHAMP

Bozo took personal instruction in the finer points yesterday under the tutelage of Mr. Jack Dempsey, who snatched five minutes out of a busy day to teach Bozo how to bounce unwelcome visitors from the Mayor's office.

After the demonstration, on the roof of Central Police Station, Bozo felt like a wash-rag, well wrung out.

The former heavyweight champion, here in connection with the Yarosz-Dundee fight next Tuesday, had dropped into the police station for a permit to carry a gun. Under a ruling made by Acting Police Supt. Jacob Dorsey, the ex-champ had to be finger-printed, as do all applicants for a permit to carry a pistol. He went through this procedure under the direction of City Detective Frank Dodson, an intimate friend.

FLYING TACKLE CAPTURES SUSPECT

Dravosburg Fireman Ends Chase After Holdup Attempt

A wild chase through the streets of Dravosburg early today ended when a fireman made a flying football tackle and downed a bandit suspect who had almost eluded his pursuers.

The suspect, police say, drew a gun, poked it into Grooms' ribs and forced him to lie on the car tracks.

Meanwhile, Police Chief Raymond McQuaide and several other members of the Dravosburg fire department dashed to the scene. Defying the armed man's alleged threats to fire, they rushed to Grooms' aid.

The armed man pulled the trigger and exploded a tear gas shell. Police Chief McQuaide and the others found themselves weeping, but they had got their man and they refused to let go of him.

The prisoner described himself as John A. Mraz, 38, of 514 Indiana avenue, Glassport. Police will check his story that he is on parole from Western Penitentiary on a burglary charge.

Mraz was pursued when, it is alleged, he attempted to break into the drug store of Robert McClarin, Dravosburg. He will be given a hearing tonight before Burgess Thomas Watson on charges of breaking and entering and carrying concealed weapons.

M'NAIR FLASHES BEST WISHES

(William Pfarr, Sun-Telegraph reporter, daily sends exclusive dispatches covering Mayor McNair's European trip.)

By WILLIAM PFARR
Staff Correspondent.

ABOARD THE CONTE DI SAVOIA (Via Radio), Sept. 8.—Steaming through the blue Mediterranean today, Mayor McNair took time to flash a wireless message to Deputy Mayor Leslie M. Johnston in Pittsburgh, wishing him good will.

The message even included "regards" to the Mayor's arch enemies, David L. Lawrence and Joseph F. Guffey, Democratic bosses.

"Dear Leslie,

"Sailing is much better than the Mayor's job. Nobody pesters me for jobs. There are no politicians aboard. I have made some new converts to economic rent and free trade, including Vittorio Brunelli, the bartender. Regards to all, even Lawrence and Guffey. Phone Betty and Helen (the McNair children) regards.

McNair."

Deputy Mayor Leslie M. Johnston, who has been at the city's helm since Mayor McNair left for Europe, has received the message of good will from his boss. The deputy mayor was pleased on receipt of the radiogram.

JURY TO EXPOSE CONDITIONS IN BUTLER HOME

Prepares to Follow Up Its Indictment Of Herold

BUTLER, Pa., Sept. 8.—The county grand jury, which yesterday indicted Fred C. Herold, former superintendent of the Butler County Home, today was expected to report on conditions in the institution following an investigation of alleged mistreatment of aged inmates.

After hearing the testimony of five witnesses, including that of A. W. Bortmess, 85, and Peter T. Ross, 65, inmates of the home, the grand jury yesterday brought in two true bills, both charging assault and battery on Ross and Bortmess.

Charges brought against Herold late in July by Ross loosed an outburst of denunciation of the home superintendent that echoed throughout the state.

Shortly after Ross filed his charges, Bortmess made out informations against Herold, alleging that the county home head had locked him in a wire-enclosed room for two days without water.

In rapid order followed a probe of the home by District Attorney Edgar H. Negley, new charges by Negley, suspension of the superintendent by County Commissioners, investigations of the institution by the State Welfare Department, and Herold's resignation.

Apparently spurred on in his investigation by Herold's refusal to admit him to the institution, Negley contrived to talk to inmates of the home outside its walls, and produced revelations that threw Butler into a turmoil.

Allegations included the infliction of physical injury, withdrawal of religious rights, imprisonment, violation of fire regulations, removal of inmates' clothing from their rooms, and similar charges of abuse of his position by Herold.

In one of his few replies to accusations leveled against him, Herold explained his action in stopping prayer meetings by saying they were love orgies.

CO-ED SLAYING DEFENSE ENDS

NORMAN, Okla., Sept. 8—(AP.)—The jury in the Neal Myers murder case retired for the night shortly after 11 o'clock last night, after hearing an impassioned plea of the state's prosecutor asking conviction of the 21-year-old University of Oklahoma student for the murder of Marian Mills, his campus sweetheart.

The defense started its closing argument this morning, and the prosecution closed.

In the arguments last night the prosecution pictured Myers as a criminal coward who caused the death of his sweetheart in an effort to avert motherhood, while the defense pictured him as a hero because "he stayed with the girl he loved until she died in his arms."

DANCER'S RIGHT IN U. S. ARGUED

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Johanna Rischke, Viennese dancer who is suing Richard J. Reynolds, heir to tobacco millions, is in the United States illegally and is being sought by immigration authorities, Reynolds' counsel charged in Supreme Court. Decision was reserved yesterday by Justice Alfred Frankenthaler.

JOHANNA RISCHKE

The charge was made as part of an application to enjoin her from proceeding with a suit for $140,000 damages against Reynolds and others. She contends they induced her to give up a lucrative stage career in Berlin and come to this country to dance.

As specific grounds for the injunction, Reynolds alleged that Mlle. Rischke has failed to pay $262 costs as a result of an appellate division ruling dismissing her complaint against him. He also sought to force her to post a bond as security for further costs.

GIRL IDENTIFIES SUSPECT

Under a heavy guard as precaution against possible violence, Samuel Hall, 22, Negro, of Homestead, was given a hearing today before Justice of the Peace J. Clyde Miller on a charge of attacking an 18-year-old white girl on the Homestead Bridge last Tuesday.

Hall was ordered held for court under a $5,000 bond after he had been identified by his alleged victim, Christina Howell, of 114 West Fifteenth avenue, Homestead, and five other witnesses.

Miss Howell screamed when she was assailed as she crossed the bridge and her cries sent several men in pursuit of her assailant. He was captured as he fled across the bridge.

Pittsburgh Girl Sees Wrestlers and Talks Of Reno Divorce

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—District Attorney Matthew Brady announced today that Colette Mulvihill Green, of Pittsburgh, Pa., who at the age of 18 claims to have been twice married, will be made a ward of the Juvenile Court if she remains in San Francisco.

The District Attorney's announcement came while Mrs. Green, who left her truck driver husband in Pennsylvania, was in Oakland attending a wrestling match.

She previously had canceled reservations on a boat which was to have taken her to Honolulu for a meeting with her mother, Mrs. Thomas Mulvihill, divorced wife of a Pittsburgh oil company official, Brady said.

"I am particularly interested in having this girl returned to her parents before any further complications may result from her behavior, and it would be well, in my judgment, for her to leave the community immediately and return to her people.

"If she refuses to do this I believe it to be my duty to use the power of my office to protect her and others with whom she may come in contact."

Brady indicated he decided to act in the matter after the girl became associated with professional wrestlers here and posed with one of them for photographs.

OAKLAND, Cal., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Unless she changes her mind, Colette Mulvihill Green will go to Reno instead of Honolulu.

The 18-year-old Pittsburgh girl, who claims her first marriage to a man in Shanghai was annulled, canceled her reservations aboard the liner Lurline scheduled to sail for San Francisco today.

While authorities attempted to extradite Poderjay from Vienna, where he was arrested some months ago on a charge of suspicion of murder, the dashing captain wrote to his bride's sister, Sally Tufverson, now in Detroit:

"If I were free I would be able to locate Agnes. Do not give this to the newspapers as both you and I have suffered greatly. I am sorry for all the trouble that has been caused you and your family. If I can get out of this, I will devote all my time and effort to trying to locate Agnes."

Baer Takes Rap at Prince Courting Former Wife

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—A remark by Max Baer that he believed his former wife, Dorothy Dunbar, and Prince Serge Mdivani intended to marry soon touched off verbal fireworks here today.

Miss Dunbar, who recently dropped the heavyweight champion's name by court permission, and Prince Mdivani, former husband of Pola Negri and Mary McCormic, of the films and opera, respectively, branded Baer's remarks as "absurd."

The Prince said:

"Dorothy and I are merely the best of friends and we have no matrimonial inclinations toward one another."

Miss Dunbar said:

"I don't intend to marry anybody."

But she declined to answer a question if she included the Prince in this statement.

Baer was decidedly hostile toward the Prince as he stopped here on an exhibition tour of the Northwest. He said:

"Yeah, I know all about her being here. (Meaning his former wife).

"She's here with that Prince Mdivani. Well, that O. K. with me. I'm all through and I'm glad to get out.

"Say, listen, talk about royal blood. Why, I've got more royal blood in my right hand than he's got in his whole body.

"I've been taken for a sucker once, and that's enough. No more ball and chain for me—at least, not the same ball and chain."

SENATE ARMS PROBERS PREPARE NEW DISCLOSURES

WORLD GASPS AT MUNITIONS INTRIGUES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—The Senate Munitions Committee, hearing repercussions from the United States and abroad to its disclosures, marshaled new evidence today for its investigation.

In recess until Monday, members of the committee promised further revelations next week concerning the far-flung operations of manufacturers of the instruments of war.

Evidence has been received that King George V. of England, intervened with the Polish ambassador in London in an effort to gain an armament contract for a British concern bidding against the Driggs Ordnance Company, of New York.

Immediately thereafter, other testimony showed that the United States War and Navy departments were "co-operating fully" with the New York company in building up its foreign business.

Senator Vandenberg, Michigan Republican, commented:

"Small wonder that peace walks on crutches today."

(London newspapers expressed indignation and astonishment today that the name of King George had been mentioned at the inquiry. Liberals in Parliament initiated a move for a similar investigation into munitions manufacturers in Great Britain.)

L. I. Driggs, president of the ordnance company, flushed deeply as the evidence about King George went into the record in the form of a cablegram from his agent in Warsaw in 1932. As the testimony was received over his objection, Driggs protested:

"That's unsportsmanlike."

Later the committee turned to this company's attempts to sell guns and ammunition in Colombia in 1933 when that nation was in dispute with Peru over the Leticia sector.

It disclosed that Commander James H. Strong, of the United States Navy, served Colombia for nearly a year before he resigned his Navy command to become head of the Colombia air corps.

He was commissioned to pass on Colombian war purchases in the United States, and as such prepared defense plans for several Colombian ports and cities, and recommended Driggs equipment to carry out his plans, it was testified.

The Driggs Company, the correspondence indicated, followed up Strong's report on the same day by submitting specifications and prices to the Colombian Consul-General in New York.

Evidence also was received that the American Armament Corporation of New York, organized late last year by Driggs employes in competition with the parent organization, maintained a brokerage account for the lieutenant-commander while he was acting as naval advisor to Colombia and still in the United States Navy.

Mussolini, Hitler In Race to See Who's Best Dictator

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

We don't know what Mussolini said to Hitler in Venice, but they weren't talking about gondolas.

Whatever it was, they are having a contest to see who can be the biggest dictator.

Adolph says he can see ahead a thousand years, and Benito says the women cannot do any more work.

We wish somebody could see ahead two thousand years and see the men not doing any work.

Looks like the contest for head man goes to Benito. If the women ain't going to work, that means the Duce is going to run everything and do the cooking, too.

GROUP TO MAKE PILGRIMAGE TO SHRINE

At the invitation of the Rev. Peter F. Cusick, a group of local Catholics will leave Pittsburgh September 15 for the first pilgrimage from this section to the shrine of the first American canonized saints of the church.

At Auriesville on the banks of the Mohawk River, then the Indian village of Ossernenon, St. Isaac Jogues and his two companions, 88 John Lalande and Rene Goupil, suffered martyrdom for their faith in the middle of the seventeenth century. Their canonization June 21, 1925, gave to America its first saints. Auriesville is also held in high regard as the birth place of the Indian maiden, Kateri Tegakwitha, known as the "Lily of the Mohawks." It is expected that she will be among the first women in America to be raised to the altar of the church.

The Pittsburgh pilgrimage will be headed by Miss Anna A. Egan. En route to the Shrine of the Martyrs, the party will stop at Buffalo and visit the venerable Msgr. Nelson Baker and his beautiful Shrine of Our Lady of Victory at Lackawanna, N. Y.

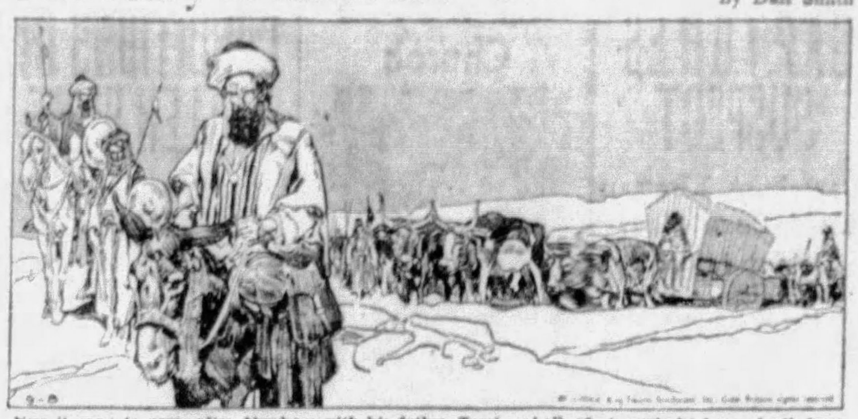
The Story of Abraham

CHAPTER I

Told in Pictures By Dan Smith



Now it came to pass, after Abraham with his father, Terah, and all their people had gone forth from Ur of the Chaldees and dwelt in Haran, that the Lord bade Abraham: "Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee; and I will make of thee a grea tnation." So Abraham took Sarah, his wife, who was barren, and his nephew, Lot, and all their household goods, and went forth even unto the land of Canaan.

And there the Lord said unto Abraham, "Unto thy seed will I give this land," and Abraham built an altar unto the Lord. Again, on a mountain east of Bethel, he built an altar and called on the Lord, then journeyed to the south.

Then because of famine in the land Abraham took Sarah and went into Egypt; but he bade her say she was his sister, lest the Egyptians, seeing that she was a fair woman to look upon, should kill him, but save Sarah alive for Pharaoh.

U. S. Has Eyes Only for Armed Invaders, Aliens Bore From Within, Says R. W. Child

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

THE INVADER!

Read the revelations of the munition makers and then turn to another thought.

If any country faced the coming of an airplane prepared to spread poison gas over its population, there would be some vigilance, some watchfulness, some careful preparation of defense.

Against the invader who comes to corrupt our system of government, to inspire riots, to take secret control of workers in opposition to decent labor unionism, to put us on the rocks where other jackass civilizations are piling up—NO PROTECTION!

We fail to stop the invader when he comes as a sailor and takes the "shore leave" we give him.

WE FAIL to close the Mexican border.

We allow the alien who comes into our household to drift around unrecognized and unbridled.

WE EVEN HAVE CABINET OFFICERS WHO LEAN TO THE IDEA THAT ALIEN AGITATORS SHOULD NOT BE SET OUT ON THE LAWN.

All right!

There we are. But it is sad in a world like this to be such fools!

The world today is not the world of the World War. In spite of all the clatter about munitions, war will not be fought in the future by marching men.

First of all, men WILL NOT MARCH.

Several European powers do not today dare to mobilize the army.

It would grab the capitol. It would seize power. It would express itself by taking the nearest—not the distant—loot.

Armies will be gangsters.

MR. CHILD

Simple folks will refuse to go. HENCE:

War of tomorrow will be war BY INTRIGUE.

AND INTRIGUE means something more than the presence in one's own nest of those cowbirds or cuckoos with a "theory" and a "cause" and a "communism."

We face not only the secret agitator who deludes the man without a job, we face not only the plotter who tries to snatch from labor unionism the power and the control of workers—making them goats. We no longer face merely the gold problems of being a homing "nest for the afflicted," as we say sentimentally without taking the snakes along with the doves.

Oh, no!

There is something else—and the wise know it.

Munitions are expensive. Poison gas costs mnoey. War is declared outlawed.

BUT WHAT ABOUT sticking in the needle of CHAOS?

It is cheap.

Send a batch of good conspirators!

Upset American confidence!

Fill our cup with corruption!

Fool our workers!

Draw the nasty line between classes!

THE CHEAPEST, BEST FORM OF WARFARE IN THE WORLD.

Against this our only protection is to—

FINE TOOTH COMB THEM when they COME IN.

IDENTIFY THEM when in, and KICK THEM OUT.

STRIKE FACTIONS 'DIG IN' AS U. S. BOARD SEEKS PEACE

BOTH SIDES SET TO CONTINUE CONFLICT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt's board of mediation strove today to find some basis for peace in the textile strike as events shaped themselves toward a new impasse in the controversy.

While a week-end lull descended on the strike, there were indications of renewed activity on both sids on Monday. Some manufacturers are ready to reopen their plants. Strike leaders plan new picketing campaigns.

Organized labor swung solidly behind the striking textile workers as President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, called all international unions into a conference next week to shape plans for support of the strike. He denied there would be a general walkout.

SOUTH CAROLINA STRIFE

In South Carolina, scene of much violence in the present conflict, the way was cleared for the declaration of a state of insurrection when Gov. Blackwood issued a proclamation against unlawful meetings, a preliminary move required by statute if martial law is to be declared.

The President's board of inquiry had both sides of the strike before it as it explored further means of reaching a settlement. The board heard Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the strike committee, for several hours yesterday, and later conferred with George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, representing the employers.

After the meeting with Sloan, Gov. John G. Winant, of New Hampshire, chairman of the board, said no proposal for bringing the opposing sides together had been made, adding that the discussions thus far had been entirely exploratory. Sloan said he described to the board conditions in the industry before and after the textile code went into effect, while Gorman gave the workers' side of the controversy and outlined the demands of the strikers.

FURTHER CONFERENCES

Gov. Winant said the board would hear a number of technical men within the industry over the week-end and would confer with Sloan and Gorman again on Monday.

A hopeful note was Gorman's statement he was "very favorably impressed" by the board.

Because of the normal Saturday closing of many mills, little picketing activity was expected today. The number of workers idle because of the walkout, estimated at 370,000, was unchanged.

With approximately a score of mills reopened in the South under state protection, additional reopenings were looked for on Monday. The assertion of Peter Van Horn, president of the National Federation of Textiles, and Arthur G. Besse, head of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers, that most of the closed mills would reopen if the employers were assured of protection was taken to indicate that many operators would resume operations. Additional companies of National Guardsmen were ordered out in North and South Carolina, and police protection was being strengthened in other quarters.

KILLINGS DENOUNCED

Official note of the killing of six men at Honea Path, S. C., was taken by Secretary of Labor Perkins in placing responsibility for the fatalities on the action of local authorities in arming as guards workers who had ignored the strike order. She told reporters:

"This is a very dangerous procedure. Such an arrangement is not the way to handle such a situation."

Green said he believed those responsible for arming the non-striking workers were "guilty of murder" and added:

"So far as I and the American Federation of Labor are concerned, we will do everything we can to place the blame and bring the guilty parties to justice—they must have known that those armed workers would shoot to kill."

Serious violence was absent yesterday in contrast to the turbulent scenes of Thursday when seven persons were killed in strike disorders. The number of dead as the strike rolled into the final day of its first week stood at 10—seven strikers, two sympathizers and one mill guard.

Hosiery Strike Call Demanded in Penna.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—A demand for a general strike in non-contract mills of the hosiery industry today bolstered the growing forces of Pennsylvania's textile strikers.

To the executive board of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, in session in Washington today, the local control board of the industry at Reading, hosiery center of the state, last night sent a call for the walkout.

Assurance that the stocking makers will be told to quit in sympathy with the idle textile workers was expressed by Edward Gallaghan, national representative of the Union in Berks and surrounding counties.

Materialization of this threat would add most of the state's 50,000 hosiery mill workers to the thousands already out—conservative estimates place the present figure at 36,000 of 70,000 to 80,000—it was indicated.

PINCHOT HOUSE DIVIDED ON POLITICS

By MARK SHIELDS

Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, wife of the Governor, in permitting petitions to be filed putting her in nomination to succeed her husband, has brought to a head a battle of principle which has been fought out in the Pinchot family over the past week.

Mrs. Pinchot is insisted that the call for a special session of the Legislature, to be issued Monday by the Governor, shall include social legislation as well as means of raising money for unemployment relief.

The Governor, persuaded by Attorney General William A. Schnader, Republican gubernatorial candidate; Judge John Fine, of Luzerne County, and F. S. Stahlnecker, former private secretary to the Governor and now a Public Service Commissioner, has decreed that the call shall be confined to relief, despite his pledge several weeks ago to the people of the state that it would be wide open.

These two divergent opinions have brought something as near a political break as can occur in a family which has for years had but a single political thought. It is known from reliable sources that the Governor and his wife have discussed her candidacy with relation to its effect upon the special session call.

EMBARRASSING SIDE

It is reported that the Governor, in the humor to support his Attorney General for Governor, felt there would be considerable embarrassment through the presence of his wife as a rival candidate. To this Mrs. Pinchot had only one answer, that the whole matter could be solved by expanding the scope of the call.

The best evidence that the Governor has not so far yielded to the persuasion of his hitherto dominant wife is that her petitions were filed last night, Secretary of the Commonwealth Richard J. Beamish, no friend of the Attorney General, keeping the Elections Bureau at Harrisburg open until the last minute.

Republican politicians are not backward in admitting that the presence of Mrs. Pinchot's name on the ballot is in some ways welcome. She is expected to take votes—should she actually remain as a candidate, which few expect—which normally would go to George H. Earle, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee.

That is the advantageous phase of the situation.

But there is another and extremely embarrassing side.

Should Mrs. Pinchot remain in the fight the spectacle would be presented of the Governor's wife running against his attorney general for Governor.

That is a manifestly impossible situation. The condition demands a political divorce. Either the Governor must repudiate his wife as a candidate, a difficult decision, or he must disavow his attorney general. Mrs. Pinchot must politically break with her husband, or the attorney general must resign from the cabinet.

LEADERS CONCERNED

It is this latter contingency which is causing the Republican leaders extreme concern as they meet today in their state convention to adopt a platform which is a sop to the Governor, a gag against social legislation in the special session call, but a gag which has not served to restrain Mrs. Pinchot.

They are perturbed as to how Mr. Schnader shall explain a resignation, which must be considered at once. They do not wish him to take a slap at the Governor's wife, though there is a universal criticism of her, for fear it will drive the Governor out of the Schnader corner, into which he has drifted through animosity toward Earle.

If the Governor, the text of his call undecided—though Republican leaders here think they have him tied in a knot—should expand his call to include the legislative proposals which Mrs. Pinchot has demanded, then she will file her withdrawal papers at once.

If the Governor lets the restricted call go, Mrs. Pinchot may delay final action until September 17, the last day to withdraw which will be well into the special session, giving the factions an opportunity to determine their stands.

also have the power to determine the extent of the expenditures."

Strengthening of the public service company law is pledged, with a declaration for enlarging the present prohibition against rate increases without approval of the Public Service Commission.

TAX CHANGES ASKED

Legislation to impose "proper limits" upon real estate taxes is advocated, abatement of penalties against home owners in an emergency is advised, and assessments would be based on the "income or use value" of real estate.

Abolition of the present state emergency relief board, made up of elected officials, is advocated, and in its place would be created a board appointed by the Governor. Greater responsibility for relief would be placed upon local agencies.

In the field of national affairs the platform attacks tariff tinkering by the President, the spread of bureaucratic government, interference in private affairs by federal authorities, and asserts that the Constitution has been circumvented by congressional action, directed by the President.

WITH ALL THE PANOPLY OF THE KNIGHTS OF OLD

NEW LEAD

The resolution on Dr. Steedle was expected to take the form of an indorsement of the attitude of Republican County Chairman William H. Coleman and Joseph B. Bialas, acting chairman of the Independent Republican Committee, both of whom have repudiated Steedle, now under sentence of two years in Federal Court on charges of vote fraud.

Steedle has been told of the attitude of state leaders, who lack the power to force him off the ticket.

PLACID AFFAIR

Except for this spectacular possibility, today's meeting was a placid affair. The platform, gesturing toward liberalism, but uncertain in some of its terms, was adopted without debate.

Aside from this, and the speeches of the state candidates, the only important business scheduled was the election of Senator David A. Reed as Republican national committeeman as successor to the late William S. Vare.

Reed, Attorney Gen. William A. Schnader, the Republican gubernatorial candidate; State Chairman M. Harvey Taylor, candidate for secretary of Internal Affairs, and Senator Harry B. Scott, candidate for lieutenant governor, spent yesterday in protracted conferences, culminating in the platform meeting last night at which a tentative draft prepared last Tuesday in Harrisburg was approved.

One of the most important of the Schnader conferences was that involving Senator Frank J. Harris, James H. Duff and James P. Malone, all of whom supported Attorney Charles J. Margiotti for Governor in the May primary. They were together for nearly an hour. At the conclusion there was an announcement that no commitments had been made, but Harris appeared satisfied with the situation.

DEMOCRATS TO MEET IN PARK

Democratic candidates for United States Senator and Governor were to meet in South Park today with Democratic workers from all parts of Western Pennsylvania, the first organization rally of the campaign. Joseph G. Guffy, candidate for the Senate and George H. Earle, II, candidate for governor, will meet local workers.

The early afternoon was to be given over to a program of sporting events, and at 4 p. m. the speaking was to begin. The speakers were to be Earle, Guffy and David L. Lawrence, Democratic State Chairman. Mrs. J. Wood Clark is in charge of the outing.

LAXITY 'AT TOP' BLAMED FOR TRAFFIC ILLS

The Police Research Commission, appointed by City Council, is delving into the tangled affairs of Mayor McNair's Traffic Court.

Meeting yesterday with the Better Traffic Committee and police officials, the commission was informed that poor enforcement of the traffic laws is not due to the man on the beat but is mainly "at the top."

A further hearing is to be held soon to determine why so many motor law violations remain unpunished.

Lewis W. McIntyre, city traffic engineer, revealed that instead of getting 10 times as many convictions as there are personal injury accidents, which is normal good enforcement, the number being punished is two-tenths of the number of accidents.

In one-half of the summons in arrest issued on serious cases, the offending motorist does not appear in Traffic Court, McIntyre revealed.

He placed the blame largely on poor records in the police department, which do not permit easy tracing of individual cases.

The situation at Traffic Court, where clerks had fallen far behind in issuing summonses was analyzed by A. W. Smith of the Better Traffic Committee.

Dr. A. L. Wise, of the Police Commission, asked:

"Is not the magistrate himself responsible for laxity in the tag system?"

Smith replied:

"In the last analysis, yes. As long as a man is doing his duty he should be retained there. We have changed so often. The magistrate should be a man who has no political aspirations. It is a position where a man can feather his own nest, and, as you might say, build up a constituency."

Wise also asked the percentage of drunken drivers and McIntyre replied that there also the records are weak. He cited the difficulty of obtaining a conviction on a drunken driving charge.

Smith in his report of conditions at Traffic Court declares that of the 67,143 tags issued in 1934 up until August 31, records show that 20,531 are not disposed of, and 13,981 offenders were discharged.

HUEY IN TRUCE WITH MAYOR

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—A truce between Senator Huey P. Long and Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley brought comparative peace to the New Orleans battle ground today.

The rivals for political control of the city agreed not to use armed men at the polls in Tuesday's Democratic primary—the showdown—unless they were ordered out by an arbitration committee.

Mayor Walmsley also accepted one point in the dictatorial program instituted by Senator Long. He gave recognition to the parish powers granted to the jolliest jury commissioners by the State Legislature, which conferred upon Long his powers.

Long, nevertheless, held his 2,000 state militiamen encamped in the Jackson barracks and under the wharf sheds of the dock board along the river front, fringing the business section of the city. Walmsley's police, 1,500 strong, maintained their positions.

Beyond the city limits, anxious parents of the youthful National Guardsmen, fearing bloodshed in the political war, appealed to President Roosevelt to intervene. Telegrams were also dispatched to state officials, warning Senator Long and the National Guard officers that they would be held responsible if any harm should befall "their boys."

Seven Die in Blast Of Cotton Gin Boiler

NEAL, Ga., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Seven men were killed late yesterday by the explosion of a cotton gin boiler, fired up to gin the first bale of the season here.

Some of the victims were blown to pieces.

WORK DEFENDED BY JOHNSTON

Public Works Director Leslie M. Johnston has declared that James W. Bamford, of the Building Owners and Managers Association, failed to get complete data before criticizing the amount of equipment used on unemployment relief projects.

In making comparisons, Bamford declared that but $396,000 had been spent for labor by the city, compared with $259,000 for rentals and office space.

Bamford overlooked a figure of $1,397,000 expended entirely for labor by the federal government on the projects, and the result, according to Director Johnston, was a "complete misapprehension."

The federal government was pledged to pay for virtually all the labor. The city paid for the greater part of the equipment and materials. Equipment costs were made higher, Director Johnston said, because of the effort by the city to do only useful construction jobs and to avoid "made work."

Printers Indorse Graphic Arts Code

Resolutions indorsing a state national recovery act law have been adopted by the annual convention of the Typothetae of Western Pennsylvania, the code authority for the graphic arts industry. Copy of the resolutions has been sent Gov. Pinchot.

Robert L. Forsythe was named president of the Typothetae. William L. Golder and Francis A. Roney, vice presidents, and Jack Gillespie, code manager.

CIRCUS HORSES EARN THEIR OATS NOW

58 Cars of Animals And Performers to Unload Tomorrow

And in their place we have the Christiani sisters—two maids who astound "regardless of their weight," according to the publicity man for the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus that comes to town tomorrow morning.

These young ladies flit about the horses' backs like wraiths, says the publicity gentleman, giving assurance that "riding stars no longer have to possess a Mussolini stature."

The second circus to visit Pittsburgh this year will unload at the East Liberty circus grounds tomorrow and prepare for the big show and parade Monday. There will be a mile-and-a-half-long pageant of animals and spangled performers in this old fashion parade through East Liberty's streets.

Unloaded from the 58 double-length circus cars will be 500 wild animals, 550 horses, five herds of elephants, 26 camels, 21 zebras and 1,300 people who are going to eat 3,900 meals a day on the circus grounds.

Riot Convictions To Bring Reward

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—Reports of continued violence in the textile strike drew from the Civil Liberties Union today the announcement of a reward of $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of police, sheriffs, hired guards or other officials for criminal acts committed against the striking workers. The offer was issued over the signature of Harry F. Ward, chairman.

Church Enlarges Musical Program

At the 11 o'clock solemn high mass tomorrow Epiphany Church will inaugurate the fall and winter musical program on a larger scale than ever before with the rendition of Lorenzo Perosi's masterpiece sung by the combined choirs and a special sermon by the Rev. L. A. O'Connell.

Tropical Fish Show To Open Tomorrow

The nineteenth annual exhibition of tropical fish will open tomorrow in Phipps' Conservatory, North Side, under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Aquarium Society. Fish from many parts of the world will be exhibited.

ALLEGHENY AUTHORITY SIGNS U. S. LOAN PACT

Agreement Now Goes To Ickes; Council Action Awaited

The three members of the Allegheny County Authority have signed the agreement with the federal government asking for a $24,500,000 loan. The papers now await the signature of Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes.

The voluminous agreement was signed by the authority members yesterday in the presence of the County Commissioners. Deputy Mayor Leslie M. Johnston, invited to attend the ceremony, was unable to be present.

Assistant County Solicitor Ralph M. Frank expects to take the document to Washington Monday night to get signatures of the federal authorities. This will open way for the allotment of part of the total loan to the authority to begin work.

However, there is still some preliminary work to be carried out and it is not likely that any funds will be allotted to the Authority until after City Council, in full session, has the opportunity to pass on the enabling legislation vetoed by Mayor McNair. The county must obtain permission of Council before doing any work in the city.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

The Private Papers of a Reporter

If I Were The Aladdin of Broadway: Restaurants that served cold toast would be bombed . . . Vincent Youmans would write another lyric such as "More Than You Know" . . . Dorothy Parker would have to give a command poetry reading every time I thought of it . . . Chefs who smear butter on hamburger sandwiches would be garroted . . . Percy Hammond would never be allowed vacations from dramatic criticism . . . Alex Woollcott would cover all the murders for the newspapers . . . Reckless motor car drivers would be forced to wear an ensemble of tar and feathers . . . Lily Pons would sing only to me . . . Billy Rose would operate all the cafes . . . People would have to tip their hats to Dan Healy, because of the many benefits he has played for the poor . . . Eleanor Powell would dance to "Crazy Rhythm" . . . Autograph seekers would have to say "please" and "thank you"—as would the celebrities who are flattered by them . . . Jim Tully would write all the Broadway columns.

* * *

The Capitol of Broadway would be Los Angeles, where humidity isn't even in the dictionaries . . . Garbo would do "Anna Christie" on the stage . . . Men who carry the torch would never, never, never encounter their old girls . . . Men who kiss and tell would have to see the best plays from the galleries behind a post—eat radishes without salt—and spend the rest of their lives sending mash notes to Polly Moran . . . Everybody would fall fast asleep as soon as their heads hit their pillows . . . There would be a shrine for the late Billy LaHiff, where all he helped could pray . . . Waiters who get in your way when Sheila Barrett is doing her elegy of a lady in a speakeasy, would have immediate appointments with a firing squad . . . Records would be made of windy drunks — and played back to them a million times when they were sober.

The Trenton Evening Times Help Wanted-Male department offered this, among other adverts: "Wanted—A second 'Walter Winchell' for credit investigations. Box 0-832" . . . Thenx, veddy, veddy mitch . . . The broadcasters and commentators of supposed information have been pronouncing the last two syllables of "quintuplets" as "up-lets" . . . Mr. Newman—the travelogue man, is appalled . . . It isn't up-lets at all, he shrieks . . . It is "you-plets" . . . Master Elinson and other wags, however, think the Dionne quintet should be "queentuplets," but this is no time for levity . . . Leave it to the cinemas, however, to give the British something so they may titter at us . . . The speech: "Write a letter to her and I" is hardly correct, but one of the recent films used it.

The most literate and outstanding moments along the White Light Way: Luella Gear's hilarious interpretation of I. Gershwin's intelligent wordage to "I'm A Paramount-Publix-Roxy Rose" at the Winter Garden. . . The immensely amusing travesty on night club chorus girls in "Saluta," a mediocre show . . . The patter in "Chained," featuring Crawford and Gable at the Capitol. Although the critics didn't think it was as good as "The Fountain" with Ann Harding at Radio City, but it is better . . . The sullen grandeur of Margo, the Spanish dancer-actress in Hecht and MacArthur's "Crime Without Passion" at the Rialto . . . The most entertaining of the Educational shorts in the newsreel temples — "Bosom Friends"—which reveals animal-enemies playing with each other.

Those stories in the gazettes about Jimmy Walker's happiness in his exile were exaggerated, as most of us suspected all along . . . No normal human being, after going through the ordeal that Walker went through, could be happy again, especially thousands of miles from his cradle . . . And so I am bothered no little when those returning voyagers seek out ship news men and pour out faked impressions of Jimmy Walker, to get for themselves what they call "publicity" . . . Jimmy Walker is most miserably unhappy . . . His eyes tell his dejection . . . Jimmy, who not long ago had almost everything a man could want, now is broke and broken-hearted . . . Mutual friends say that Jim tries not to be bitter, but he is . . . He is most bitter against the army of hangers-on who shared his spotlight, but who were the first to desert when his colors went down . . . The loyal friends tried to tell Jim they'd be glad to arrange money for him, but he kept changing the subject . . . They call it pride, I call it madness.

Star Once Paid to Work

By LLOYD PANTAGES

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 8.—W. C. Fields will have you to know that every time he signs a new contract he weighs each item very carefully before applying his John Hancock on account of once when he worked in park near Philadelphia for $5 a week, he discovered, at the end of his first week of being a thespian, that the fare back and forth from Philadelphia to the park, cost him $4, plus his agent's fee of a dollar and a half, hence, at the end of slaving, he found out it had cost him fifty cents to do his stuff.

The Bingo Crosby-Richard Arlen short-wave radio set contest is now on, and the winner of the $1,000 bet, which will be given to charity, will be the one who, in the course of a week, gets the most logged stations, plus distance, plus an additional 15 points to whoever dials in on Admiral Byrd.

* * *

Jean Rouverol, the little girl who, through illness, was withdrawn from the cast of "Eight Girls in a Boat," has been given a new break in "Back Porch," and she still has it in her contract that for six months of the year she will be permitted to attend Stanford University. The other six she will devote to her art.

Jack Dawn, the gilder of the lily at MGM, seeing as how he is the make-up expert, will have you to know that motion picture stars, long after they have finished their careers, will look 10 and 15 years younger than average individuals of the general public. His reason being that the oils from good cosmetics keeps the skin soft and supple and that the routine of putting on and taking off make-up twice daily gives exercise to the muscles of the face. Maybe he is right, but I got make-up poisoning the first time I worked in pictures.

Powell Star In Stanley

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Dick Powell, who left for Hollywood a little more than two years ago and has since become a leading movie star, of national popularity, came home to the Stanley yesterday. A packed house noisily proclaimed a real welcome. Dick repaid with a speech of thanks and vocal numbers.

Dick, who has had the duty of introducing many artists as master of ceremonies in the Stanley, had the experience of being introduced, himself, for a change, appearing at the close of a stage program that includes Carr Brothers, show-stopping acrobats; Collins and Peterson, laughmaking clowns; the dancing Collette Sisters and Albertina Rasch dancing ensemble.

The screen feature, "Desirable," had Jean Muir, George Brent and Verree Teasdale in leading roles. Miss Muir, one of the most pleasing of the newer stars, was the personification of guilelessness as a boarding-school girl who attracts the interest of an admirer of her mother, Mr. Brent. Maternal efforts to keep matters from the matrimonial satus provide a mother-daughter feud that ends in daughter's favor. It is an interesting film.

HOT FROM HOLLYWOOD

By JIMMY STARR

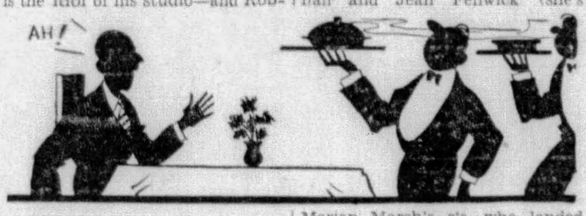
HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 8.—Hello! Muriel Evans gets the line of "She Dyes for Her Art." In other words, Muriel, to win a role in "Evelyn Prentice," dyed her platinum locks a copper red. Director Bill Howard reports such an improvement, the M-G-M studio bosses are figuring on urging her to keep it that color.

* * *

Tom Brown is a happy lad once more—he's to star in the Gene Stratton-Porter yarn, "Laddie," for RKO, the very same film plant which caused him a few frowns because they didn't—at least, that's what he thought—give him the roles he wanted.

* * *

Of course, there's the star who is the idol of his studio—and Robert Gleckler quips: He's the best "yes-ed man in Hollywood!"



* * *

Virginia Meyer and Mildred Rehn, dancing girls, have been chosen for spot roles in "The Great Ziegfeld" and "The Gold Diggers of 1935." . . . Lillian Templeton designed such unusual sandwich stand costumes for scenes in a Fox movie, two of the ham-and-cheese drive-in spot owners are trying to buy 'em from the studio for practical use.

Warners put Warren William opposite Barbara Stanwyck in "Concealment," her next heavy drammer.

The Frank Borzages took charge of Arrowhead Springs over the week-end.

* * *

Cliff Steele practically ate the place out of food. The Harry Toplitzkys, the Leon Levys, James Pierce, Louis MacLoon, Lucy Rynan and Jean Fenwick (she's Marian Marsh's sis, who landed the lead in MacLoon's show), Johnny Gates, Marie Levanhagen and many others made it a splashing good time at the pool for cooling-off purposes!

* * *

Charlotte Granville exploded the other day over a certain unusually dumb actor—"He's the kind of ham who always does right-wrong!" . . . The Darryl Zanucks are baby buggy shopping for a third time.

* * *

Because she practiced her Southern drawl for the past six years, Joyce Compton landed a nice role at Fox.

* * *

* * *

Just as Muriel Kirkland had four trunks packed and was about to give Hollywood, the movies and all the orange groves the grand go-by, Jesse Lasky engaged her for a role in "The White Parade."

* * *

Director John Ford's new yacht originally cost $30,000—but things are tough in the boat business and he managed the bill of sale for the small sum of eight grand.

Jack Osterman lost 10 pounds using Paul Whiteman's diet, and is now planning a comeback with Sunday night vaude shows.

'Our Mary' Recalled

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Last Tuesday I talked on WCAE about "Our Mary," the famous American actress, Mary Anderson, who is still living in England at the age of 75. Since then I have met a number of people who saw Mary Anderson, among them a couple who witnessed "Pygmalion and Galatea," and remembered it as one of their precious memories of bygone days. They were surprised to know that this play was written by the same man who wrote "Pinafore" and "The Mikado," W. S. Gilbert, who furnished the librettos for Sir Arthur Sullivan's operettas.

Mr. Seibel

Everybody was glad to be reminded of Mary Anderson, and agreed that no praise was high enough. But I have received one letter which adds something new to my knowledge of Mary Anderson and also calls for a word of explanation. The letter is from Frank L. Spohn, Senior Vice Commander of a North Side Chapter, Disabled American Veterans of the World War. He writes:

DISSENT FROM READER

". . . I am taking the liberty to disagree with your opinion, as expressed in tonight's broadcast—which, by the way, was a gem—that Mary Anderson was not a 'great' actress, only a beautiful girl with a marvelous voice.

"I had the rare opportunity of seeing her and E. H. Sothern play the 'bedroom scene' from 'Macbeth,' while I was convalescing at Dartford, Eng. . . . I thought her acting was superb. . . . Mary completely 'dominated the interview.'

"The show was put on by some of the leading society folks of London to cheer up a bunch of wounded soldiers, most of whom preferred the singing and dancing turns, but to me Mary's 'Lady Macbeth' was easily the most enjoyable part of the entire performance, which included the best talent obtainable. She really appeared actually to 'live' the part."

The letter speaks for itself. The word of explanation I have to add is that the opinion of Mary Anderson's acting was not my own, but that of the veteran critic J. Ranken Towse.

Big Strike On Screen

Hearst Metrotone News brings to the screen first pictures of the great textile strike from many states. In various parts of New England huge mills stand silent and deserted. In Patterson, N. J., a vast mass meeting is seen cheering strike orators.

From Newport, R. I., come the latest pictures of Rainbow, picked as defender of America's Cup against the British hope, Endeavour.

Seventy-five thousand jam Zach's Bay, at Jones Beach, N. Y., to see the biggest water carnival since the last Olympics.

The great international air meet at Cleveland brings to the screen an amazing bunch of thrills as an army of sky kings gives various hair-raising exhibitions.

A tidal wave in the form of Nellie Waite, world's fattest female, hits Shanghai, China. Nellie is 26 and she weighs 783 pounds.

Laugh Show In Pitt

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

Laughs, are plenty in the Pitt this week. Roy Rogers, as a reeling inebriate, offers clever dance steps. Leavitt and Lockwood, the chubby-blonde combination, prefer imitations and songs. Their especial high-jinks go to Mae West and Wallace Beery for its source.

Horse play comedy is paraded skittishly by Kirk and Lawrence, while Murand and Girten cover plenty of ground on their bicycles. From the audience come Jean Granise's two aids who eventually froget clowning for a bit of song.

Ventriloquism, as handled by Vox and Walters, with their sober faces, and fighting dummies, is well received. A tuneful finale comes as the Mayfair Revue providing a lilting flow of numbers. Chester Morris is on the screen in "Embarrassing Moments."

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Grins and Bitters.

IT SOUNDS old to me, but I think it's a swell drunk story just the same. Maurice Golden unfolded it the other night, and I pass it along to you with a low, sweeping bow.

It seems that the stew wandered into a drug store just before the closing hour. He gazed blearily at the clerk.

"I gotta get something," he muttered. "Poshitively gotta get something. But I can't remember what I gotta get."

The clerk was a trifle jittery. "Well, hurry it up, buddy," he said. "It's late and I want to get home."

"Okay," grinned the drunk. "Okay. I'll let you go jus' as soon as I can think of what I gotta get. Tell you what you do. Jus' name a few things you got here, and maybe I'll remember what I want."

The clerk shrugged his shoulders.

"That's a large order," he declared. "But I'll try anyhow. Was it a toothbrush you wanted?"

"No" returned the drunk. "No toothbrush."

"Was it a shaving cream? Magnesia? A lettuce and tomato sandwich? Mouthwash? Aspirin?"

"No," said the drunk. "You're not even getting warm. Keep guessing."

"Listen," cried the clerk. "I'm getting tired of this. I've named almost everything. If you can't think of what you want I'll have to close up."

The drunk waved his hand. "Jus' a minnit. Jus' a minnit. Don't get excited. I jus' got an idea. Call me off the namesh of the Great Lakes."

"The Great Lakes?" repeated the clerk. Well, there's Lake Michigan—Lake Ontario—Lake Erie—"

"Thas it," interrupted the drunk excitedly. "Thas what means something. Lake Erie. Now what was the name of the feller that said, 'let's stick to the ship, boys'? What was the name?"

The clerk thought for a moment. "I think," he said, "that that was Admiral Perry."

The stew clapped his hands in complete happiness.

"There you are," he howled triumphantly. "Let me have five cents worth of PERRYGORIC!" . . .

* * *

I RAN into Nick the Greek the other night and asked him how conditions were.

"Not so good for me," he replied. "They get me both ways."

I asked him what he meant.

"Well," he sighed, "all the suckers call me a gambler. And all the gamblers call me a sucker!" . . .

FRANKNESS is the advertising program of the Forum movie theater in the Bronx. Discovered by Elizabeth Austin: 'ENJOY OUR SHOWS IN COMFORT. OUR COOING SYSTEM NOW IN OPERATION!" . . .

TAKE it from Al Barbieri, the very beautiful—and very dumb—chorine was playing in Atlantic City when she was invited to the greyhound races.

When she arrived at the track she turned to her escort and asked him where the buses were!

"If your six other readers think they have dumb girl friends," says Robert Edelson, "then they've never been out with mine. While passing a movie house on Broadway the other night, I gave her a piece of information.

"'That place, Margie,' I said, 'is the house of flops.'

"'Oh,' she replied happily, 'I'm so glad you showed it to me. I always wanted to see the place where you can get a bed for 25 cents a night!" . . .

Ted Lewis Heads Show In Penn

By MARGARET RUSSELL

Do Pittsburghers like stage shows with their movies? The answer seems to be "Yes." Ted Lewis and his band packed 'em in at the Penn yesterday.

Ted Lewis has with him a good show. The band is snappy and the girls are pretty.

Paul White, 16 and Teddy McDaniel, 12, two dark-skinned lads, "steal the show" from right under Ted's battered topper. But Ted, himself, knows how to get the audience right down on their hands and knees in the aisles. Yes, siree! He throws out handfuls of peanuts and do the grown-up kids in the front rows scramble for them! They sure do.

Robert Montgomery is not quite as funny as he might be as a tough city slicker adrift on a farm in "Hide-Out," the feature picture, with Maureen O'Sullivan opposite. He knows how to win the girl, though, and that's all you can expect of any hero. The program includes a Traveltalk of Africa, an Our Gang comedy, "Honky Donkey," selections from the "Cat and Fiddle" by the Penn orchestra and Hearst Metrotone News.

LITTLE AMERICA JOINS .·. With Organ, Drum And Harmonica .·. IN DANCING AROUND WORLD

Eight Cities Also Stops On Tour

Little America is going to get in on that dancing around the world program the Columbia chain has cooked up for its Saturday night list.

The program is to have orchestras at eight cities in various sections of the world, will run a half-hour at 8 and will have WJAS as the local outlet. Stops will be made in each place long enough to give a real sample of dancing tunes available.

The Little America group has only three pieces. They consist of harmonica, a small organ and a drum made out of airplane fabric and wood from a packing case. The hotter the music the better they like it down there at the bottom of the world.

Irma Glenn Sponsors Own Recital

By AIRCASTER

The no-name sponsor has stirred things up again. When the gentle old lady from the south first said she wanted to sponsor Irma Glenn's organ recital on NBC, the executives went all to pieces.

The sponsor wanted to remain anonymous . . . s/he was willing to pay a neat sum for the show . . . and she asked four nothing except that Irma 'play' the organ at specified times over the network. The offer was made when NBC announced there were taking Irma's program off the air.

The whole thing was without precedent and no one knew what to do about it. Finally network decided to take the order. Irma has been on the program for years as the only artist who plays for a sponsor who has no product or desire to advertise.

Now NBC demands a label for the recital, one that will tag them as commercial. Sponsor demands anonymity, to frown now on. Irma will be touted as her own sponsor.

Joey Nash, singer with the Dick Himber Orchestra, as important to the orchestra as the band is to him, and sits 'out a perfect setup, is the champion physical wreck and hard luck guy of the kilocycles. He bragged yesterday that he hadn't been to a doctor for two whole days—and then found he was the victim of a boil. That came just after Joey had paid $500 to be rid of sty on the eyes.

Some weeks ago, he grew a couple of mastoids and went deaf. He might have been forced to cease singing if he hadn't possessed "natural gaitch" which enabled him to warble without hearing the band. The mastoids followed a serious case of grippe last season, from which Joey nearly passed out. An airplane ride cured him of deafness. At the moment, probably in sympathy with the boil, Josey's teeth are aching.

Beginning next Thursday night, the Paul Whiteman broadcasts will feature each week a "big moment in musical comedy" in the nature of a tabloid musical show, in which big names associated with productions of the past will be brought to the mike at intervals."

S. L. Rothafel—Roxy is a canny showman, who sometimes overlooks hels himself. During recent days he has been frantic with auditions in preparations for his Columbia (WJAS) series which starts September 13. During the series he expects to throw on a bit of comedy now and then and yesterday he wanted to hear some lads who could handle a cockney accent. He didn't want to see them. He merely wanted to hear them as any listener would, so he went into a secluded room and turned on the audition. Joust speaker six dialecticians did their stuff without getting a rise out of Roxy. The seventh proved adept in the cockney talk Roxy sent word out to hire him. But it turned out that Roxy had hired him six years ago. The lad whom they brought in was Roxy's own valet, Amos, who got the job.

Roy Shields, whom you remember as the band leader for Phil Baker, and Bottle—and Beetle, is the NBC musical director in Chicago, and he has sold Notre Dame, his alma mater, an idea. It is that football teams should be trained to rhythm and tempo, to insure teamwork and co-ordination of thought and impulse. From now on, a military band, playing Shields' own compositions of martial airs, will afford the motif for all Notre Dame practice.

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

I can hear nearly a thousand Globe Trotters say:

"Well, it's about time he wrote something about the stkte bonus for veterans and their dependents."

From your notes, cards and letters I take it that you are becoming a little tired of the usual story about the necessity of patience.

I checked again with the office of Guy Griffith and I can inform you that although all the veterans have not as yet been taken care of, the Department of Military Afairs is making payments to dependents of veterans.

Here are a couple of people who have checks ready for them but cannot be located.

MIKE FILA, C. C. C. Camp, Foxboro, Mass.

MRS. THELMA LAWRENCE, Lauder street, Pittsburgh.

My word is still good. I will keep after the department until all the checks are paid or know the reason why.

My Midget : : Daily Short Short-Story

By MARTHA GWIN KISER

Tinker Toy was riding down to the world's fair grounds on the "L" today. He loved to ride on the "L," but he usually took a cab, because his little feet hardly reached the floor of the car and everybody always looked at him. Little girls nudged mothers and pointed. Young girls "kidded" each other about him condescendingly. Tinker Toy did not mind being stared at in the Midget Village—much—that was his job. But outside he hated it; had always hated it.

But Tinker was not thinking of being stared at now. He was doing a little staring himself at the man who sat across the aisle from him, the tall, straight, slim man with one long, slender leg thrown over the other.

Now, if I were 6 feet tall I should be a policeman, thought Tinker, or even a captain in the army! When I went out in the evenings I should wear a tall silk hat and trousers with a stripe down the leg. Bet I would be a dashing fellow.

"What a man!" I would make the girls say instead of, "Isn't he cute?" When I rode on trains or cars I should always stand, of course, grasping one of those straps in the ceiling and reading my paper. I would ride spirited horses and play polo! Play tennis! I would swim for championships—and I might even do a little wrestling! I have always felt, too, that trapeze performing had its good points. I would float through the air with the greatest of ease.

And I would have me a tall girl, too! No little mites for me! I would sit with one leg over the other, like that fellow across the aisle. And I would ride the surface cars just for the fun of throwing my legs out into the air and hopping them after they had started! Tinker's face grew hot as he remembered how, once, a man had actually picked him up and set him on the platform, thus winning a laugh for himself from the onlookers, but a blush for Tink.

Yes! If I were a tall fellow I should—— But the crowd was getting off at State and Van Buren. He must change trains. Tinker made his way out under arms and bundles. The tall fellow came just behind him.

But what was the crowd surging to the edge of the platform for?

"Can't somebody get it?" cried a girl, towering above him.

"Yeah?" a smart, young fellow told her; "And let the next train get him?"

"But it is hurt!" the girl argued, "And——"

Tinker crowded and pushed through. What he saw, below there on the tracks, scuffling and dragging along, was one of the loop pigeons. It, apparently, had a broken wing and it dragged a leg. Its beak was open; its breath came in quick gasps, lifting the beautiful, iridescent feathers on breast and throat. It edged toward the charged rail.

"The train is coming!" cried some one. "Can't you scare it a little and make it try to fly? Somebody—push it with your cane—or an umbrella—or something!"

"Here! Quick? Lend a hand, fellah!" Tinker grasped the hand of the tall man and swung himself down onto the tracks. He bent his little body over and swooped up the pigeon. He almost lost his footing as he hopped aside for the steel monster that bore down toward him. And, although the train was slowing to a stop, two whole cars passed over the track where the pigeon had been before it came to a stop.

The tall fellow leaned down and drew Tinker up to the platform, while the crowd surged about, laughing and cheering. A girl took the bird tenderly in her arms.

"What is your name, pal?" asked the tall fellow.

"Tinker To— I mean, Joseph L. Carter," stammered Tinker, looking up at Tall. The man grasped Tinker's little hand in his.

"Well, I'm proud to know you, Carter! It takes a BIG man to risk his own life for that of a bird! This is one of the biggest things I've seen in my life, and I'll never forget it!"

"The bird—it was so small—" Tinker apologized.

"See this tiny man in his own surroundings! Tinker Toy! The smallest man in the world!" advertised the barker in front of the Midget Village.

"See you've been getting yourself in the paper!" smiled the giant gatekeeper as he lifted Tinker from the platform, "but I've always known that it takes a big man to be a midget!"

Tinker smiled up at his friend and trotted into the village. And the heart that swelled under his tiny, made-to-order shirt really seemed too big for his body.

Monday: "Blue Ghost," by Ellen C. Phillips, is a strange story of a lovely girl who believed she could more than fill the place left by a bride who died. Eve was warned of the great love she would have to overcome, but she refused to heed the warning.

News Behind the News :-: By PAUL MALLON

New Dealers Hail Sinclair With Promises

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—When the Socialist-Democrat Upton Sinclair met Republican Chairman Fletcher inadvertently here the other day, he smiled at Fletcher and said, in an offhand way:

Mr. Mallon

"Well, I guess we may be at each other's throats at any time now."

"Any time."

There was many a New Dealer who would like to have said that, but couldn't. In fact, the New Dealers welcomed their unwelcome guest with such cordiality that it must have seemed just a little strange to him. If he had come to Washington before he won the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in California, he would not have been able to get in to see an office boy in the New Deal.

As it was, he saw nearly everyone, without waiting, was everywhere given the glad hand and, to all surface appearances, was a big hit.

MORTGAGES

Predicaments seem to come just as naturally to senators as high hats. There is a Democrat in one now. The mortgage on his home has been shunted around in such a way that the HOLC now holds it. He is worried that the situation may become public, but there is no reason why he should be. His connection with the transaction appears to be fully legal now, although it was not at first.

The way it happened was this: A bank held a mortgage of $15,000 on the Senator's house. He paid off $3,000 of it before the bank got into difficulties. Then the bank demanded $3,000 more under a reorganization scheme.

It seems that the bank owed him around $3,000 for legal fees. He declined to pay on his mortgage until the bank paid him. Finally the bank figured out a way whereby the mortgage was transferred to the HOLC. An application blank was presented to him and he signed it. The HOLC then took over the mortgage which it holds today.

All this happened before Congress slipped through that bill authorizing congressmen to get loan relief from government agencies. Therefore it may have been technically illegal, although the Senator was not aware of it at the time.

NOTES

The recent anti-Socialist statement of Senator Hastings was issued by Republican headquarters here, although it was really telephoned from Newport, R. I., by the Senator. Apparently Hastings considered Bailey's Beach a baddate line for an anti-Socialist statement . . . Two letters have been received at Democratic headquarters applying for the position of seal enumerator for Alaska, although no such job exists. It would be a nice long task to count the seals up there, but Patronage Dispenser Hurja passed it up because he figured it would be too damp . . . Matters have been definitely patched up between Prof. Moley and Louis Howe and they are seeing eye-to-eye again.

2D INDICTMENT FACES DONLEY

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—An embezzlement case against O. Otto Donley, business man of Morgantown, W. Va., arising from alleged shortages in the estate of a deceased uncle, moved toward completion in Greene County Court today.

As soon as the case is completed, Donley will be arraigned on another indictment in which he is charged with embezzlement of $80,000 worth of Liberty Bonds from the same estate.

Attorney W. J. Kyle, of Waynesburg, administrator of the estate of Donley's uncle, the late James W. Donley, former Greene County school teacher, appeared as prosecutor as the Morgantown man was called yesterday for trial.

Lawyers Will Check Powell Film Talk

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—William Powell is going to have a tough time getting across anything "illegal" in his closing address to the jury in the picture "Evelyn Prentice."

The producing studio has hired the entire staff of a legal firm—six lawyers—to check and recheck the script for technical errors and to act as advisers during filming.

GIVE TO Charity BEFORE YOU GIVE UP THE GHOST!

NINE-TENTHS of the history of generous impulses can be summed up in the single word: POSTPONED—think, for example, how many millions for charity are locked up in the Wills of the living waiting for the testators to die!—and think how much more charitable it would be if some of those frozen funds were working now to alleviate human suffering and distress—how much greater is the charity that gives before dying instead of dying before giving!—why not do a little more while you're here and leave a little less when you go?

The DE PAUL INSTITUTE would like to be remembered in your Will but that does not help the DE PAUL INSTITUTE right now—it cannot take care of today's burdens with tomorrow's bequests—its needs are imperative and immediate—it must raise $40,000.00 a year to carry on its Christ-like activity of making the deaf to hear and the mute to speak—and it asks you in your charity to draw a check in behalf of the great charitable work that every hour draws upon it for support.

Bishop Boyle has ordered a collection for this great undertaking in every Catholic Church on Sunday, September 9th, 1934, for the benefit of one of the worthiest charities in the country. A dollar from every one in the Diocese of Pittsburgh would carry on this noble charity. If you can both hear and speak, may we count upon your contribution of at least a dollar next Sunday?

GIRLS TODAY WED AT FAR EARLIER AGE THAN THEIR MOTHERS

Youth Follows Example Of Grandparents and Marries in Teens

By Marion Brunot

Girls of today are MARRYING at an EARLIER age than did their mothers. Almost every day in the society columns, and again in the social weeklies—even among our own friends—someone whom we think ENTIRELY TOO YOUNG announces her approaching nuptials.

It used to be our American women did this very thing. If we look back we will discover that most of our grandmothers and our great-grandmothers were wives when and before they were eighteen.

I remember of being told that my grandmother had been slow getting a husband, that she belonged to the picking and choosing variety of girls. And to my surprise when I found a written document which proved she was but 19 when she married my grandfather.

During the early part of this century and the years of the Great War, young women became socially and intellectually minded. More outdoor jobs, college occupied four years for them after high school was over. There was an awakening in benevolent movements. Community co-operation of all kind became the vogue. All these interested the young women, and kept them away from early marriages. Wise people were heard saying: The longer you wait, the more chance you have for HAPPINESS.

But the PENDULUM SWINGS AGAIN. And again the very youthful bride is walking down the aisle. How young she appears. And that gorgeous innocent expression found nowhere else than upon a young girl's face.

And voices are raised against it. A nation so advanced in economics, in educational issues, in modern attainments of all kinds, should not allow the making of homes to go back to its OLD ORDER.

Enough rocks are to be found on all matrimonial roads, and no girl should rush onto that road too rapidly.

Yet I WONDER.

The depression has taught us MANY THINGS. It also has led us back into some very comfortable times which we had thought were left behind forever.

It has made HOME MORE SACRED.

The security of a ROOF has been forced upon us.

And domesticity is bound to be in VOGUE once more.

The younger generation is a wise one. Pictorial art has taught them much which but a few years ago had to be learned only through the written page and actual experience.

We are a MORE FREE people. We aren't hemmed in any longer by fetishes which tied so much real knowledge up for us until we were too old to need it.

And with all this, why shouldn't the daughter of the house MARRY EARLIER?

Of course the chains which bound the oldtime woman into seridom when she became a wife have been broken. Families are smaller. Invention has lightened housework. Education and general mental uplift has raised the veil from the faces of nearly all women. A wife is and never can be anything else, if she so wills, than a man's EQUAL.

In fact she may have the BIGGER FREEDOM.

Youth is the time for love. No one ever pictures age as the roseate period for kisses.

So I say, LET THE WEDDING BELLS RING. Garner in the youthful brides.

Scatter the RICE and the OLD SHOES on the heads of the really young people.

Romance is having its INDIAN SUMMER.

It has come back to us in all its GLORY.

Suggests That She Go With Others, Then Quits

Helen has an OUT-OF-TOWN beau. He has been very attentive, sometimes calls a couple of times a week to see her. But lately his visits have ceased. And she writes for me to unravel the mystery for her.

Dear Miss Brunot:

I have a boy friend who lives out of town. He did come often to see me. Sometimes twice a week. Lately he has stopped his visits. Shortly before he stopped he suggested I go out with other young men. Yet we had gone so many places together, that I was unhappy in so doing. I have seen him once, but he did not see me. Shall I accept his attentions? HELEN.

Try and find some happiness by accepting the neighborly attentions. The next time you see your old beau and he has his back turned, tap him gently on the shoulder, and tactfully, find out the reasons for his ceasing to call. If they prove to have been indifference, then make up your mind to forget him altogether.

Dear Miss Brunot:

We receive no telephone calls, and our porches are empty, there are two of us, very chummy. We go to dances, but everything ends there. We do not smoke nor do we pet. We try to be agreeable, and talk all the time. Yet we lack nerve in making advances toward the boys. There are girls who haven't the reputations we have, who have plenty of beaux. Please help us.

QUERY AND QUANDARY.

Maybe you are too supercilious. You may talk too much. Men like to have a chance to express themselves. Being a good listener, and sympathetic, and not at all critical of others, not even other girls, help to give you popularity. A coalition, such as can be formed when two girls are too chummy and too critical, can ward off the attentions of even the best men. Are you sure it is the nerve that you lack where men are concerned, or is it kindness and diplomacy?

Twist Dial On Tawdry Programs

By Angelo Patri

The radio is now a part of daily living. No household can escape its influence even if it would. The children listen to their favorite programs and talk them over with their friends. Like it or not their new force is educating the children, forming their tastes and moulding their opinions. It behooves us to pay some attention to the quality of the work it is doing.

Many parents complain about the quality of the program to which their children listen. They say something like this: "The Such and Such program is awful. It frightens the children so that they are afraid to go to bed. There ought to be a law against such programs being on the air."

Parents of the older group complain in similar fashion: "I can't see why such a man is permitted to express the opinions he does over the air when thousands of young people are listening to him. The man ought to be in jail for talking the way he does. Why isn't he taken off the air?"

Music is the most popular form of entertainment on the air. All kinds of music are offered, the poorest and the best. It is possible to hear the greatest artists in the world, or the worst performers conveying the poorest quality of music ever created during the same hour. Parents say, "I do wish they'd stop putting such stuff over. The children seem to prefer it to any other and it is going to ruin their taste for better things. Why can't something be done about it? Such programs ought to be forbidden."

Many of these complaints are justified. Many programs are cheap and mean to the utmost degree. But for the life of me I cannot see why there should be any question about suppressing them when any radio owner who has the power of his right hand can close them out and tune the good ones in. Why make laws and establish bureaus to do what you can so easily and with proper dignity do for yourself?

Listen to the programs that your children tune in. If they are healthy in tone, even if they are not classic performances, let them alone. If they are vulgar, cheap as to ethical values, tawdry in form and color, tell the children so. Educate their taste. Help them find the better programs. There are fine ones on the air. Don't shoulder your individual responsibility off on the community or upon that mythical power, the law.

Health Facts Told About Arteries

By Dr. R. S. Copeland

Today I wish to tell you about an ailment with a terribly big name. It is known to the doctors as "Thromboangiitis obliterans." This is a strange and unusual disease of the arteries and more commonly called veins. It is "Buerger's disease," named after the physician who contributed to our present knowledge of the disorder.

Dr. Copeland

Its actual cause is unknown. At one time it was thought to be a disease confined to Hebrews. Recent reports reveal its presence in individuals of practically every nationality.

The disorder occurs in young and middle-aged adults. The veins and arteries of the lower limbs are usually involved. But the disturbance may occur in the upper limbs, as well as in other portions of the body. The vessels become inflamed and a thrombus or clot forms. This obstructs the vessel.

There is complaint of numbness and spasmodic pain in the diseased limb. It is cold and has poor circulation. If the ailment is neglected there is likely to be an infection. This leads to excruciating pain and often results in gangrene.

Persons with Buerger's disease should avoid any infection of the foot. It is imperative to eradicate all centers of infection, such as diseased teeth, tonsils, nasal sinuses and similar conditions in other parts of the body. As much rest as possible should be obtained. If the physician advises rest in bed this advice should be strictly heeded.

Avoid the use of tobacco, alcoholic beverages and other stimulating drinks. The diet should be simple and bland. Omit all fried and greasy foods and restrict the use of salt, peppers, spices and other condiments.

When gangrene develops it is imperative to obtain immediate medical attention. If recognized in its early stages and energetic measures are taken then, relief is obtained. It is only when neglected that the gangrene spreads and, in that event, the only chance of saving the life of the sufferer is by amputating the diseased limb.

Invitations Should Be Individual

By Mrs. Beeckman

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have received an invitation and it was to a reception. It was addressed like this: Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Jones and family. I have three married daughters. Two of them seem to think that the invitation included them, too, but I do not agree with them. My point is that they should have received separate invitations, addressed to them in their own homes. I think the invitation was for my husband and myself and our single daughters living at home. What do you think?

WAITING.

No one could answer this question for you with final definiteness except the people who sent the invitation. It is because of this sort of confusion and indefiniteness that I am constantly urging in my column that this incorrect form—and family—should never be used on an invitation.

You are, of course, thoroughly right in maintaining the separate invitations should have been sent. If these friends couldn't send separate invitations, they should have listed, on the envelope, the names of the members of your family whom they meant to include in the invitation.

I am inclined to think that, considering the fact that your three married daughters have their own homes, that only the members of your family living at the address to which the invitation was sent, were included in the invitation.

Not Congratulations for The Bride

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I received an invitation to a wedding which is to take place in a few weeks. I am not going to attend the wedding, but I am going to send the present in a few days. I am not acquainted with the groom-to-be, but I would like to send an informal letter of congratulations. Should I send this to the bride-to-be before the ceremony, or to Mr. and Mrs. after the ceremony?

2—What kind of letter paper should be used? F.

1—You might write a letter of best wishes (not congratulations, ever, to the bride, only to the groom), to the bride now, or perhaps you'd like to send a telegram of good wishes to the bride and congratulations to the groom, this telegram to arrive directly after the ceremony has been performed.

2—Your double-sheeted letter paper, plain white and of good size for your handwriting, is excellent for this note and for all other social uses.

Human Character Often Reflected In Bids

By Josephine Culbertson

The human character is quite frequently reflected in the bidding of Contract hands. Just as we have liberals and conservatives, dullards and imaginative people, we have in Bridge overbidders and underbidders, prosaic bidders and brilliant bidders. Several of the experts have often been accused of bidding in an unnecessarily "fancy" manner. Their critics tell them that their chief object in life seems to be to make their partners' task as difficult as possible.

Mrs. Culbertson

Today's hand was given to me as an example. All I can say in that if the North and South bidding was "fancy" on this hand, I want to be "fancy" myself.

West, dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

	♠ K Q J 9 8 2 ♡ A K Q 9 6 4 ◇ — ♣ 8
♠ 7 5 ♡ 10 7 ◇ A Q 9 3 2 ♣ A Q 6 3	North West East South	♠ 10 6 4 ♡ J ◇ K J 8 5 4 ♣ K 10 7 4
	♠ A 3 ♡ 8 5 3 2 ◇ 10 7 6 ♣ J 9 5 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	2 ◇ (1)	Double	Pass
Pass	3 ◇ (2)	4 ◇	Pass
Pass	5 ◇ (3)	Pass	6 ♡ (4)
Pass	Pass (5)	Pass

1—The North hand is easily strong enough distributionally to justify this Overcall in the opponents' bid suit, which, of course, is forcing to game. North is really too strong simply to use the Takeout Double, even disregarding the fact that the Takeout Double would be dangerous because of the possibility of a leave-in by South.

2—The opponents have released South from the obligation of responding to North's force. However, the North player has no desire to choose a suit himself and wants to force his partner to do it. In addition, he wishes to show the great strength of his hand, which the repeated overcalls in the opponents' suit tend to do.

3—Again South has been released from the obligation of bidding. North's third diamond bid is perhaps ever so slightly dangerous and unnecessarily spectacular. However, the North players, with a freak of this type, cannot be blamed for wanting to indulge in unusual bidding pyrotechnics. North reasons that by again bidding diamonds, thus shutting out the possibility of a final contract of five clubs, he will make South realize that the North hand must be a spade and heart two-suiter, and that South will respond accordingly with his best major, even if it be only three cards in length. Five-odd in either suit looks safe enough to North.

4—Faith plus intellect accounts for this seemingly insane bid by South. South realizes from his partner's repeated cue bids, and particularly the last one that the North hand must be good enough to practically insure a contract of five hearts or five spades, even if South himself held a complete Yarborough. South further knows that there cannot possibly be any duplication in the Ace of spades and that therefore this card must eliminate one of North's two losers. In addition, South realizes that if he bids only five, North, who has forced the bid, absolutely must pass unless a spade trick is the only possible loser. Obviously seven would then be a laydown with South's spade Ace. South followed up his reasoning by taking the proper action. He jumped from five diamonds to six hearts, holding four to the eight-spot, with only an Ace on the side. This bid by South was both brilliant and sound, and it is easily seen that the contract cannot be defeated.

5—North, of course, knows that his partner cannot possibly have both black Aces, and despite South's Jump he cannot think of bidding seven.

A Sequel to HEART OF A WIFE

By Adele Garrison

Hugh Urges Madge to Withhold Judgment

At Hugh Grantland's whisper that he had "needed me so," I with difficulty controlled an impulse to rise from the chair my sister-in-law had placed for me close to his bedside, and flee from the room.

Lillian's warning had torn a veil from something that I had been cherishing without my own knowledge, a romantic sympathy with Hugh which I was now feverishly afraid had been visible to other eyes less keen and kindly than Lillian's.

The reaction had driven me to a point where I wished to be anywhere rather than in Hugh's presence. Yet I could not have disregarded this summons from a wounded man, and I knew that, now I was here, I must find out what he wanted of me and promptly execute any commission he might lay upon me.

So, with fists clenched into my palms, I managed to get out a quavering, "Yes, Hugh. What is it you wish me to do?"

His eyes had closed with the effort of speaking to me but they opened at my answer, and he smiled up at me.

CONCERNING LEE CHOW

"How—wonderful—you are!" he breathed. "Always ready—"

"You mustn't waste those minutes Dr. Braithwaite gave you in talking about anything trivial," I admonished him, somehow forcing a smile with the words. "Please let me know just what it is you want, so that I may go about it."

His smile faded and his eyes, noted for their keenness, regarded me steadily for a second, then flickered away. But I had a sense in that second of having my soul turned inside out, and knew that Hugh, though in ignorance of what had changed my attitude toward him, cherished no illusions that it had not altered, and was hurt accordingly.

"It—concerns—Lee Chow," he said, his voice suddenly formal even in its halting syllables.

I caught back an exclamation for even though Lillian had vaguely warned me that Hugh would speak of his high-born Chinese friend, I could not bring myself to any willingness to come in contact with the Oriental.

"I know," Hugh said faintly, and evidently speaking with difficulty, "that you believe Lee Chow instigated that attack upon—your husband—and that, therefore, you shrink from seeing him. But I am asking you to reserve judgment upon him, until after you have talked with him."

"You—wish me to see him?" I asked dazedly, and with a sense of actual terror at the thought of an interview with the man who had so startled me by his patent belief that I should belong to Hugh instead of to my husband.

"Not if the thought of it frightens you to that extent," he said tenderly, but there was something underlying the chivalric tenderness which brought the hot blood to my cheeks. Was it possible that he subconsciously—I knew that he never would consciously criticize me—was accusing me of cowardice?

The thought was like the flick of a whip lash. I threw up my head and faced him steadily.

NOT FRIGHTENED

"I am not frightened to any extent," I told him. "If you will tell me what you wish me to say to Lee Chow, I will go to him at once."

"There is nothing I wish you to say to him—now," he said. "I simply wish you to listen to what he has to tell you. He tried to tell it to me before his seizure, but could not. And now Dr. Braithwaite will not permit me to go to him, and Lee Chow cannot be moved from the room in which he is lying—not until his heart action shows improvement. It is imperative that I know what he wishes to tell me, but—he will tell it to one one except you or me, therefore—"

He paused and looked at me hesitatingly. I seized my courage with both hands, dragged it to the light and held it fast.

"Therefore I must see him at once," I said, rising. "Is anyone with him?"

"Your father," he answered. "But—I must warn you—Lee Chow has told him that he must see you alone."

HOW TO WIN BEAUTY

By Charmion Penn

Too many women are satisfied to do their skin cleansing with what might be termed "a lick and a promise!" And hence the early arrival of muddy spots . . . blackheads . . . darkish lines and patches. Of course, in most, or at least many instances, patchy dark splotches on the skin are caused by internal troubles rather than outward lack of care . . . but the latter has its bad effect.

We, personally, have known girls to go to bed after a "large evening" . . . tired and bedraggled and too sleepy to care about whether their "face comes off" or not. Which is bad . . . very bad. Imagine what this does to the pores in your skin . . . they're choked, unable to breathe. And not only this . . . but you leave them filled with the grit and grime that they have accumulated during the day or the evening (if you have been out). Any skin, no matter how dry, has SOME oily secretions in it, and these, in themselves, are enough to clog the pores if they are not attended to properly and kept clean. And this in turn makes for enlarged pores . . . the bane of any woman's existence if she wants to have a clear, velvety skin that looks young. For there is nothing young looking about a face full of pock-marked effects left by enlarged pores . . . and the more these are neglected the larger they become.

Besides . . . cleansing is such a simple ritual. A great many people use soap (others protest this loudly, but according to many cosmeticians, the choice is mainly yours, depending on how your skin responds). So, if you are going to use soap on your face . . . don't do it TOO often, and when you DO do it, be sure the soap is a good one . . . without TOO much alkaline reaction on your skin. There are dozens of good soaps that are made expressly for use on tender skins, and any one of these would be a good one for you. There are also many good ways of cleansing the skin other than the use of creams. Almond meal is one. Take a little in the palm of the hand and moisten with a bit of warm water. Make a paste by stirring and puddling about in this for a moment, and then wash your face in it. It will peel off the dirt and the dead skin cells, and leave your face as soft and velvety as any gay young thing's!

As for the creams . . . and these being the more usual, the quicker and the better known methods of cleansing, more women use them . . . there are two types in particular which have come more and more to the fore of late years. The liquid cleansing cream . . . and the liquifying cleansing cream. Do not mix the two of them in your mind . . . for they are vastly different. The liquid cleanser is (generally) used for oily skins, although there are those that are recommended for normal skins as well. The liquifing cleanser is the more usually used of the two, as it is applicable to either a normal or dry condition. It is a cream proper . . . which liquifies the moment it goes on your skin.

A PLEASING DISPOSITION BETTER THAN BRAINS, STATES FAY KING

By FAY KING.

If her clothes are crisp and clean, and becoming in line and color, he will be pleased with her.

The average man doesn't know much about materials, and imports, and a pretty girl in a basement bargain dress will make a more favorable impression than another whose shoe buckles cost more than her entire wardrobe.

Of course it is nice to have money to buy fine things, but never despair because you lack this. Bright eyes will ever outshine diamonds, and a pleasant disposition is better than exceptional brains.

Be your best self and you need fear no rival who dresses better.

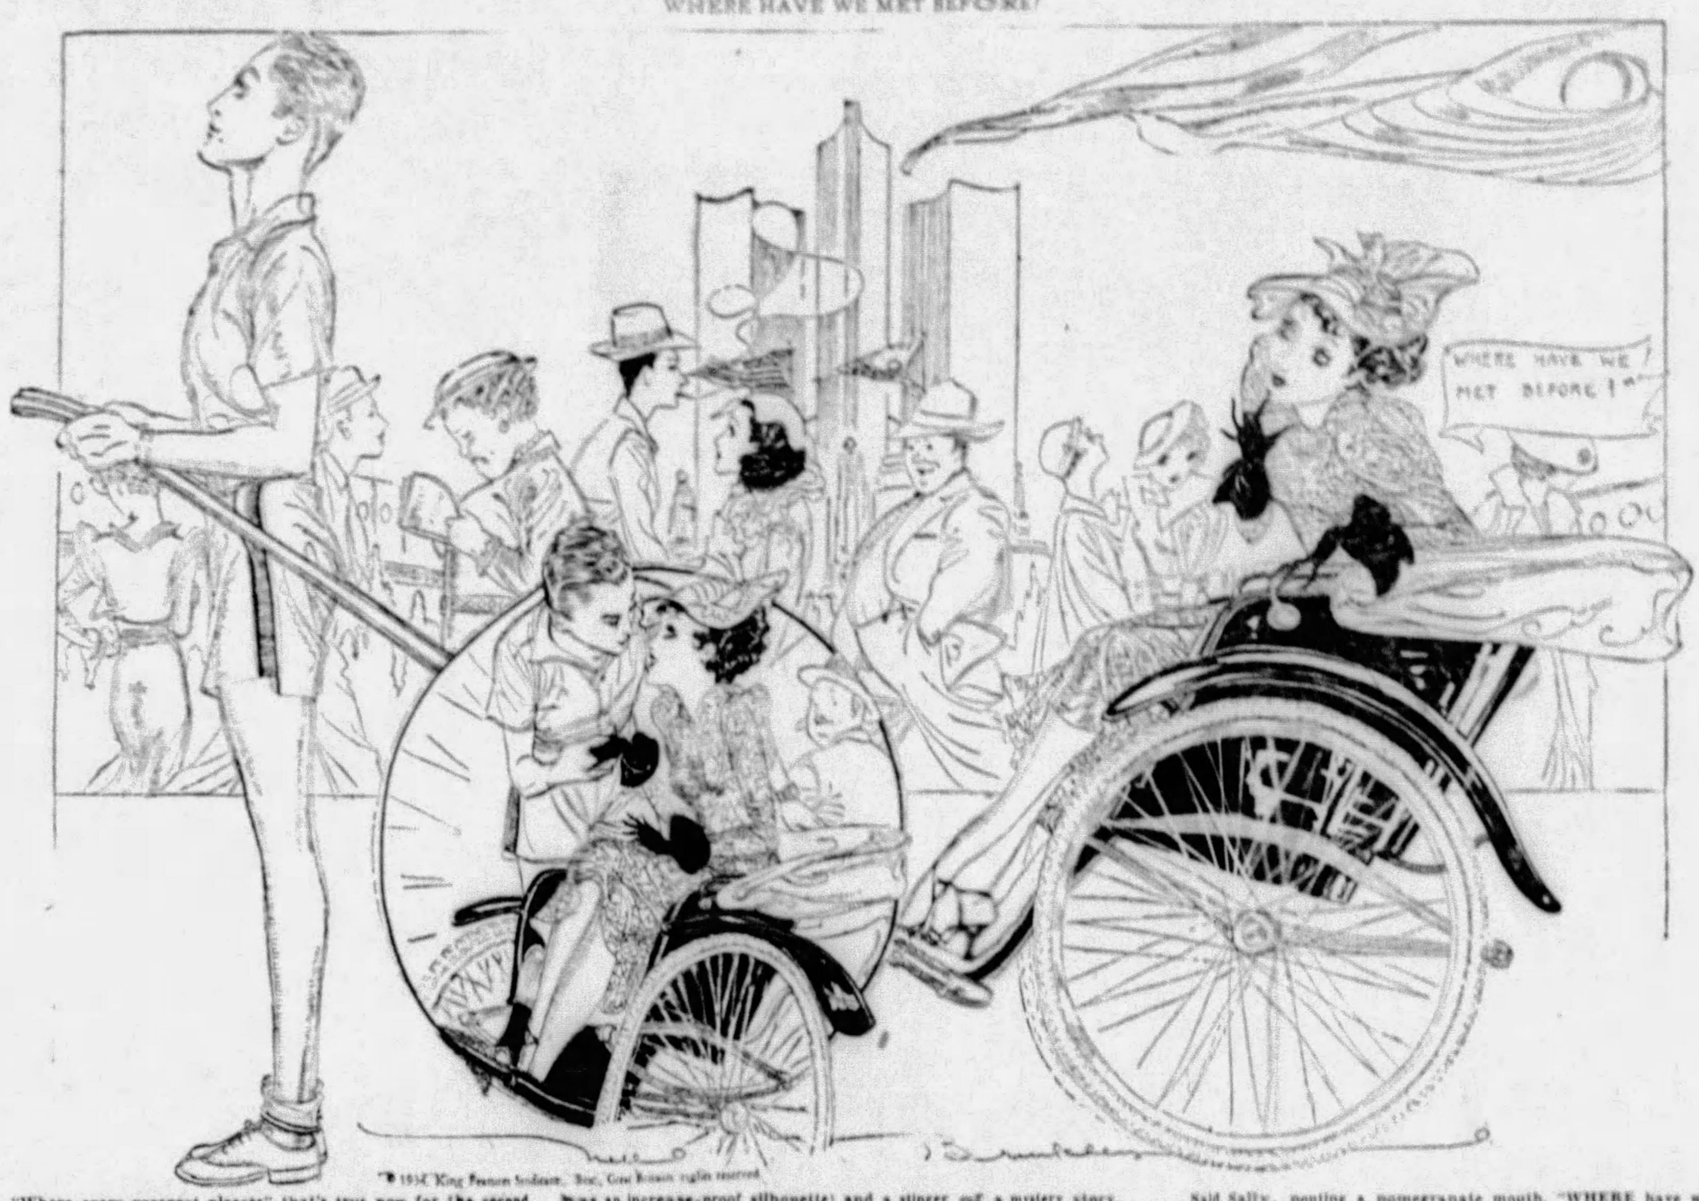
Miss America Goes to Chicago's World's Fair

By NELL BRINKLEY



© 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc., Great Britain rights reserved

"Where every prospect pleases" that's true now for the second of the Beautiful Trio. For Cupid has arranged things—for Sally!

Romance was already abroad in the sense of beauty of form and light — architecturally, scientifically, artistically — everywhere about Sally, Sue and Sylvia. Every plan that banishes dull care and boredom was working smoothly, so far as seeing wonders, eating international food, wandering through old-world villages, seeing priceless things six inches close was concerned. Oh, the Fair was a huge success—save for that expected adventure that involves the god of love just around the corner.

The trouble was—it was always just around the corner! Then "Cousin Sam" blew along for Sylvia, to make the towers taller and the rainbow fountains glitter brighter. But Sally and Sylvia put on their prettiest for each other—and saw the sights some more.

Came a day when Sylvia was off with Sam in a gondola or some such delightful vehicle of flight. For Sue was tootsie-weary, and stayed home in a powder blue negligee with some potato chips (Sue has an increase-proof silhouette) and a stinger of a mystery story.

So Sally fared out alone. And the good fairy of lovely maidens must have been in charge that day, for Sally goat on her "sissy" dress instead of one of the "heavy duty" frocks, and her fechingest beret. Something told her. And lonely, wending nowhere in particular, she wore her most feminine and took the road to the Federal Building of A Century of Progress.

And there, before the three fluted towers soaring above the great dome, Executive, Legislative, Judicial looking down from their stony majesty, Sally took a little wheel chair, all red and black and rubber-tired. She contemplated her high heels, sighed a little, and then remembered that these were the things that were drawn by nice, chatty college boys! Who hasn't heard that? Sally had forgotten it for a melancholy moment.

She looked—but this boy wouldn't look! He stood straight, presenting a huffy, broad back.

Sally tried to see his face. She couldn't know he was keeping a wary eye in the corner.

Said Sally, pouting a pomegranate mouth, "WHERE have we met before?"

And then, around from in front of the straight, broad back came a pleasant baritone voice, and it sang back, "DON'T you remember me?"

Quite a few pedestrians were electrified then by a little scene right in the midst of traffic. It was the young man of the roadster, of course, far back in the apple orchard!

"Sally!"
"Barry!"
"What's your last name?"
"What's yours?"
"Did you know all the time you were coming here?"
"I would have found you."
And so on, and on, and ON.

How to Use Left Over Potatoes

By Alice L. Barry

Potatoes that are left-overs should not be worried nor need they be served up again as hashed brown or ironmake. If the family is weary of them served that way. So we are offering some new and delightful recipes with potatoes as a foundation.

To make potato scones, mash two tablespoons of potatoes with a tablespoon milk and one ounce of butter. Stir the potato mixture gradually into one large cup of flour. When thoroughly mixed, roll out about an inch thick and cut into rounds. Place on greased paper and bake in quick oven for 10 or 15 minutes.

Here is a wholesome dish for hungry children when the weather is brisk. Mash one pound boiled potatoes with a nut of butter and a little milk. Add two ounces currants, two ounces chopped candied peel, the grated ring of a lemon, and three tablespoons sugar. Stir well together and add a beaten egg. Spread a greased pie dish with raspberry or strawberry jam, pour in the mixture and bake in moderate oven for half an hour. Sprinkle with sugar and serve with stewed fruit.

Gnocchi with potatoes is a popular dish and calls for some potatoes boiled in salted water. When potatoes are done, peel and mash thoroughly. Mix the potato puree with an equal quantity of flour till it is smooth, then roll out and cut it into strips. Pinch off little pieces of these strips and cook them in plenty of salted water. When they are ready take them out and serve with a not too thick tomato sauce. Nice sprinkled over with cheese.

Potato croquettes offer a delicious luncheon dish. Melt some butter in a saucepan, add the required quantity of boiled, sieved potato and heat. Add some chopped parsley.

Then add salt and pepper to taste, the yolk of an egg, and if desired, a little milk. Turn onto a plate to cool, then with floured hand shape the mixture into croquettes. Brush with the white of the egg, coat with bread crumbs and fry in hot fat.

To make a nice luncheon or supper dish, slice one pound boiled potatoes, then place in greased pie dish. Cover with a layer of sliced hard-boiled egg, add a few drops of anchovy essence and sprinkling of salt, salt. Cover with fine bread crumbs, dot with butter, sprinkle with grated cheese, then bake in hot oven for 20 minutes.

All World Will Be Wearing Satin Garb in Autumn

By Alice Alden

All the world will be wearing satin this Autumn it would seem, since every country is featuring satin fashions. A nice afternoon ensemble is of a milk chocolate brown dull satin. The bodice is of matching chiffon with delicate gold bead embroidery.

Coming back is the perfectly plain, but beautifully cut and detailed, frock of fine black woolen, crepe or baghera with tiny touches of glitter. Such a frock is a model in black baghera. It has a plain, bloused bodice with high, draped neck. Tiny hooks and eyes of rhinestones make the sole trimming.

A shining hour can be spent watching the gleaming satin frocks that are seen at all smart functions. There are lovely satin evening coats as well. A new and lovely frock is brown satin with twisted straps of orange. Orange satin also lines the hem of the trained skirt.

She Learned to Dive

Never in my life had I gone near a diving board. Still I thought it would be fun just to look down into the water from the edge of a high-dive. Very pompously, I trotted up the iron steps displaying my new green rubber bathing suit. Suddenly I wanted to turn back, but already a line of divers had formed behind me. Helplessly I gazed down at the mass of people staring up. There in the crowd I noticed my old boy-friend. Not for the world could I shove back down those steps now. So I stood on the edge of the board, very giddy-like, planning to jump off from loss of balance. For the public's benefit, I poised for a pretentious swan's dive. Just then as I lifted my head and arched my back I felt a tragic splitting in the seat of my rubber suit. In one second I was off the board. Later, after blushes had faded to lighter pinks, I learned that I actually dove off that board. My thanks to rubber suits!

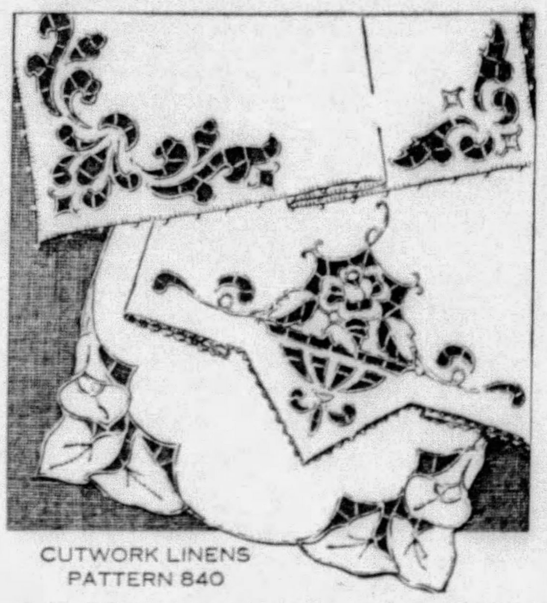
NEEDLEWORK DESIGNS



CUTWORK LINENS
PATTERN 840

If you need anything in the way of linens, these cutwork motifs are the thing to use. Scarfs, towels, pillow-cases, those small linens that are so serviceable, all can be most effectively decorated with these designs. The calla lily will make very smart corners, done either all in white or in a variety of colors. The rose motif makes a most effective towel. The scrool designs are a form of cutwork that is a bit different and is most effective. (Here the entire design is in the part cut away, showing it up to the best advantage.) This form of cutwork is called Richelieu and is done exactly like the other. If you like, you can make a picot on each bar, a little detail described in the directions. These motifs are lovely on any type of household linen, from pillow-case to tablecloth.

Pattern 840 comes to you with a transfer pattern of two motifs 5 x 9 inches, two motifs 3 x 4½ inches, four small motifs 1¾ x 2 inches, two and two reverse motifs 5½ x 6 inches, and two motifs 8½ x 12½ inches.

A college romance becomes news this afternoon.

At a tea in their home this afternoon the Elmer Dwight Harshbargers, of Gladstone road, are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Eugenie, to Davis Levis Lewis, of Raleigh, N. C.

MISS PRISCILLA BARNES

Eugenie is tall and brunette and smart looking. And she has dimples, as you can see in the picture at the right.

Her fiance is the son of the Davis Levis Lewises, of Elkins Park, Philadelphia. Their son now lives in Raleigh, N. C., and he will take his bride there.

Both Graduates Of Swarthmore

Both Eugenie and her fiance are graduates of Swarthmore. He prepped at the William Penn Charter School in Philadelphia. His parents and his brother, Lawrence, are here for the tea today.

Eugenie will be out of town a week from today for a wedding—not her own, of course.

She's to be a bridesmaid at the wedding of two more Swarthmore graduates who'll be married that day.

The bride will be Eugenie's classmate, Ada Graham Clement, daughter of the John Stokes Clements, of Buttonwoods, Jenkintown, Philadelphia, and the bridegroom will be James Russell Jones, of Vineland, N. J.

Priscilla Barnes Will Be Honored

The coming week will be full of entertainments for bride-to-be Priscilla Barnes.

Priscilla, the daughter of the G. Webber Barneses, will marry Carl H. Schusler, son of Mrs. Henry Schusler, a week from today in the Episcopal Church of the Ascension.

Tomorrow the Joseph Pontefracts will give a tea in their home, Elmer street, for Priscilla and her bridegroom-elect.

Mrs. Robert F. Miller will be hostess at a bridge-luncheon Tuesday in the Pittsburgh Country Club honoring Priscilla.

On Wednesday there'll be a tea which the Benjamin Jarretts will give in the Barnes home. On Thursday night the Howard H. Schuslers, parents of little Nancy Schusler, who'll be flower girl at their wedding, will entertain.

Elizabeth Jenkins, who'll be maid of honor at the wedding, will give the rehearsal dinner in the Longue Vue Country Club Friday night.

Spending a week at the Greenbrier, White Sulphur Springs, are Mrs. Joseph K. Love and Mrs. Russell Love, of Johnstown.

Dr. and Mrs. Ogden M. Edwards, Jr., have been at the Plaza, New York. They've been summering, as usual, at their summer place in Easthampton, L. I.

Prominent Families Leaving Pittsburgh

Last night Mrs. William T. Shannon, of Sewickley Heights, entertained at a dinner in the Edgeworth Club honoring the George O. Morgans, of Edgeworth, who will leave October 1 to make their home in South Orange, N. J.

And Pittsburgh will lose another prominent family—the Walter C. Carrolls, and their daughter, Mary, who has been publicity director for the Pittsburgh Junior League for a number of years.

Mrs. Carroll and her daughter will leave late this month for New York, where Mr. Carroll has already gone and taken an apartment in East Fifty-third street.

Anna C. Wilson To Marry Today

A bride of today will wear dawn pink crepe with a matching hat at her wedding, and will carry Johanna Hill roses. She is Miss Anna Catherine Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Wilson, of Hamilton avenue, and she will marry William Roy Cooper, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Cooper, of Monaca, in the Children's Chapel of the Second Presbyterian Church, Wilkinsburg.

She will be given in marriage by her father. Her sister, Mrs. Paul H. Crago, as matron of honor, will wear blue and white chiffon with a blue hat and will carry a Dresden bouquet. The best man will be Robert B. Fairchild, and ushers will be Paul H. Crago, Wilkinsburg, and Elvin W. Batchelor, of Rochester, Pa.

After an informal reception Mr. Cooper and his bride will motor to Washington and will be at home in Beaver.

Children Gain Weight at Farm

A total gain of 1,608 pounds in weight was made by the 665 children who were taken to the Fresh Air Farm of the Pittsburgh Association for the Improvement of the Poor at Oakmont this summer. As every child was accepted at the urgent request of some physician or hospital, because of the child's subnormal physical condition, this gain in weight is regarded as remarkable and has been the cause of general commendation of the farm by those engaged in child welfare work.

The farm, which opened June 30, is closed for the season. Sixty-one children were kept there for the entire summer because of the extraordinary need in their cases. The maximum gain in weight made by an individual child, during a two-week period, was 7½ pounds.

Mrs. Edward Vose Babcock is chairman of the Woman's Auxiliary committee, which has charge of the Fresh Air Farm.

Miss Crouch, Avalon Man To Wed

Miss Margaret V. Crouch, daughter of Mrs. Vada G. Crouch, of Lincoln avenue, Bellevue, has chosen September 22 as the date for her marriage to W. Carothers Irvin, III, son of Dr. and Mrs. William C. Irvin, Jr., of River road, Avalon.

Mrs. Robert G. Crouch, of Bellevue, sister-in-law of the bride-elect, will be her matron of honor and only attendant.

Supper Tomorrow At College Club

Tomorrow evening the College Club's September buffet supper will be held. Mrs. Clyde Stewart Rine is the general chairman in charge of this club activity.

At the membership luncheon next Tuesday Mrs. H. Lloyd Cleland, chairman of the membership committee, will review "Hear Ye Sons," by Irving Fineman. This series of luncheons is now beginning its second year and continues in popularity with both old and new members, although it was begun only for the latter.

Officiating will be the Rev. Herbert Beecher Hudnut, of the Bellevue Presbyterian Church.

The bride, to be given in marriage by her father, will wear her mother's wedding gown of organza with inserts of lace, made with a train of ruffles bordered with lace. Her veil of tulle will be finished with a cap of tulle caught with orange blossoms, and she will carry a colonial bouquet of Killarney roses and lilies of the valley.

The bride's mother will wear Alice blue lace with a corsage of Johanna Hill roses, and the mother of the bridegroom will wear sapphire blue velvet with gardenias.

At the wedding dinner there will be 10 guests at the bride's table which will be decorated with white summer flowers. Mr. McGee and his bride will motor to Chicago where they will stay at the Edgewater Beach Hotel.

Pre-nuptial entertainments for the bride were given by Mrs. Bivin, Mrs. Helen Voorhees, Mrs. William Zeiher, Mrs. Samuel Lysle, Mrs. Glenn Guy, Mrs. Alice M. Harmon, and the bachelor dinner was given by Thomas H. Bivin. Benjamin H. Moore gave the rehearsal dinner at the Hotel William Penn.

John Fullerton was best man and Maitland Bourdon, the bride's brother, and Henry W. Krey were ushers.

Mrs. Guy Ewing and Ernest Zeck played the wedding music.

Programs Listed by Clubs

MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Year books are pouring into the mails these days in a perfect deluge. One of the newest is that of the Wilkinsburg Junior Women's Club. With "This Modern World" as its general subject, the Wilkinsburg group has outlined its programs on applied science, art, drama, current events, fashions and education. The president's reception, set for September 17, will be marked by a musical program, Leo Allera, violin; Frank Kennedy, piano, and Cass Ward Whitney, baritone, presenting it.

Bell Telephone talkies will be heard and seen in October. December's attraction is a musical tea. Elmer Kenyon, of Carnegie Tech, will give the drama talk and in conjunction with the educational program children from the Western Pennsylvania School for the Deaf will give a demonstration. The May program will be given in honor of the seniors.

And then there's a quartet of social affairs, in addition to the regular meetings—a masquerade buffet supper, a children's party, a valentine bridge and a picnic supper.

Besides its president's day with which it opens the season on Thursday, the Ingomar Woman's Club will have many worth while programs this year. October's meeting is to take place in the Franklin Methodist Episcopal Church with the Ladies' Community Organization, the Ingomar Social Club and the Bradford Woods Woman's Club as guests. Mrs. Jennie B. Roessing, of the Juvenile Detention Home, is to talk on "What Are You Doing about Juvenile Delinquency?" and there will also be talks concerning current plays and concerts, a feature which is to be carried through nearly every meeting.

Mrs. H. C. Sheaff, speaking on "Color Harmony and Care of House Plants"; Miss Grace Ely, on "The Rejuvination of Last Summer's Wardrobe," and Ralph Griswold, superintendent of Pittsburgh's Bureau of Parks, are other speakers. What sounds like one of the most delightful of the season's affairs is a covered dish dinner to be served at the closing meeting in the garden of the president, Mrs. Carl Van der Voort. The program under auspices of the drama and music committees will include music by the North Hills Music Club and a play in which the club members and their husbands and friends will be presented.

The Bryn Mawr Farms Woman's Club book is another newly issued one and announces the first event—the annual flower show—for Wednesday of next week. Charles Reizenstein, Dorothy Duff, Dr. G. D. Whitney, Dr. Max Schoen and Miss Helen Grimes are the season's scheduled speakers.

Miss Foster Bride Of W. J. Howells

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison W. Foster, of Winton street, have just made known the marriage on May 10 in Wellsburg, W. Va., of their daughter, Miss Helen Bernice Foster, to William J. Howells, of Rossmore avenue, Brookline.

James J. Long's Sports Comment

TWENTY YEARS AGO today, in the National League, the climax was reached in baseball's most sensational pennant climb. The Boston Braves fought their way into first place to stay when Bill James pitched them to an 8-to-3 victory over Rube Marquard and the Giants, who had been heading the procession up to that time, and then the wonder club of George Stallings went on to clinch the pennant on September 29 and to accomplish later the first clean-up of a World Series in four games. The Braves had been in last place as late as July 19. They climbed to the top by winning 55 of their next 69 games. Of their final 78 contests of the year they lost only 17, the terrific pace of .782.

No other ball club ever has been so hot over such a long stretch.

Only One .300 Hitter

THAT AMAZING BOSTON team had only one .300 hitter, Joe Connolly, who batted .306 and led the team in home runs with nine. The Braves of 1914 were the first club to carry two complete sets of alternating outfielders—Connolly, Herb Moran and Josh Devore playing against right-hand pitchers, and George Whitted, Leslie Mann and Ted Cather against southpaws.

Aside from the flaming spirit of Rabbit Maranville and Johnny Evers, the chief reason why the Braves were able to make their unparalleled uphill fight to the pennant peak was a great three-man pitching staff—Bill James, Dick Rudolph and George Tyler, the last named a left-hander. James won 26 games and lost 7, Rudolph won 27 and lost 10, and Tyler, after a poor start, won 16 and lost 14—a total of 69 victories for the trio against 31 defeats.

Old Champs at Ringside

FORBES FIELD WILL resemble a section of fistiana's hall of fame when Vince Dundee and Teddy Yarosz battle there next Tuesday night for the world middleweight title. In addition to Champion Dundee himself there will be four former ring kings in the picture. Jack Dempsey, heavyweight ruler from 1919 to 1926, will, of course, be the outstanding celebrity among the spectators after refereeing a couple of the preliminary bouts. Johnny Kilbane, world featherweight champion from 1912 to 1923, is coming from Cleveland, and, as previously published, at the ringside also will be two old wearers of the middleweight crown for which Dundee and Yarosz will be fighting—Frank Klaus, who occupied the throne in 1913, and George Chip, who succeeded him.

New Quarter for Troy

THOUGH IT HAS been reported that Bill Howard will precede Cotton Warburton as quarterback for the Trojans when they meet Pitt here next month, Coast rumors now say that Coach Howard Jones has found a new starting quarter in Bob Smith, a 190-pounder, transferred from Chaffey Junior College.

That's hard to believe. For one thing, there wasn't an outstanding jaysee quarterback in California last fall. And besides it would be a huge contract for any newcomer to break in past such a trio as Howard, Warburton and Davy Davis. Howard, with 10 pounds added since last season, still looks to have the best starting chance. Warburton, of course, will be the reserve ball packer again.

Pedley Holds Polo Key

WHILE UNCERTAINTY AS to the playing form of Cecil Smith, Elmer Boeseke and Babe Williams clouds the West's chances of repeating last year's victory over the East in the big polo matches starting today, supporters of the West contend the latter still will have an edge if Eric Pedley at No. 1 is at the top of his game. It will be a Pedley series, they insist, and as Pedley goes, so will go the matches.

Eric Pedley.

Boeseke, Smith and Tommy Ritchcock are the only 10-goal men in American polo. Pedley is handicaped at only eight goals. Westerners argue that this rating of comparative values is misleading, and that for evenly balanced play, forward and defensive, there is no finer competitor than Pedley in the world.

TRAINER HEINE BLAUSTEIN HELPS DUNDEE WITH BODY EXERCISES

Dundee Displays Fitness in Workout

Vince Dundee is in better shape for his world middleweight title match with Ted Yarosz, the local challenger, at Forbes Field next Tuesday night than he was when he came here to box Frankie Goosby and Yarosz last year.

He is fit for the battle of his life to save the crown against a dangerous contender, make no mistake of that. He has worked off all of that superfluous fat he formerly carried around his waist line, and his legs are thin and full of spring. In his first workout here after his arrival yesterday, he did the equivalent of 12 rounds at the Pittsburgh Lyceum and had to be forced to stop. He did not box, but punched the bag and went through other maneuvers. He perspired freely and breathed normally throughout, an indication of good health and condition.

At both the small and large bags and on his rope-skipping, medicine ball work and stomach exercises he showed a lot of life and seemed to enjoy the grind. If he can keep the same edge until he enters the ring he will be a tough champion to beat even by a boxer of the class and ability of Yarosz.

Dundee also appears to be in the proper frame of mind for the test. He said:

"So long as they're handing out $75,000 purses for fights I'd be a sap to lose that title. I'll be back for more. I'm in shape right now and I'll be even better when the night of the fight rolls around."

Vince was to engage a couple of sparring partners this afternoon, when he will shift his training quarters to Hickey Park, Millvale.—KECK.

Champion Fit For Yarosz Battle

BATTLE TWICE POSTPONED BY RAIN

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The 15-round welterweight championship fight between Barney Ross and Jimmy McLarnin still is a "coming attraction" today.

Stalled twice by inopportune rain squalls, Chicago Barney and his Celtic challenger rapidly losing all patience with an obstinate weather imp, hope to wage their return bout in Madison Square Garden bowl tonight. If they do it will be the first time in many years any title fight has been held here on a Saturday night.

HOLIDAYS MAY INTERFERE

Should a further postponement be necessary, the match will go over for several days, perhaps until Wednesday or Thursday, to avoid conflict with the Jewish holidays.

While the principals have accepted the two successive postponements philosophically, the same could not be said for their managers. Pop Foster, McLarnin's pilot, said:

"This is terrible, just terrible. Jimmy is in fine shape and he was a cinch to win back the title Thursday night. He would have been equal to the task if there had been only one postponement but I don't like two of them. I know he can still win but I wanted him to be at his very best. But that Ross fellow is not benefiting by this either."

Something along the same line came from Art Winch and Sam Pian, who handle Ross' affairs, but the champion himself seemed worried not at all.

TO WEIGH AGAIN

As a result of yesterday's second postponement, both fighters will have to weigh in again today at noon in order to prove they still can make the welterweight limit of 147 pounds. Ross, who scaled 140 pounds when he hopped on the scales Thursday afternoon, will have no trouble, but McLarnin, at 143½, has a much smaller working margin.

Additional ticket sales the past two days have virtually assured a crowd of 45,000 or more if the fight is held tonight with receipts close to the $194,000 the two battlers drew in May.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Mickey Cochran "went to town,"
A Tiger was his pony;
Stuck a feather in his hat,
And shouted, "I'm no phony!"

Mickey's dreaming of the day
The Series will be startin'—
No Giant bold can steal his glove
As did one, Pepper Martin.

Speaking of catchers and the Pepper Martins who swipe their mitts, did you notice that few National League baserunners are taking any liberties with Tommy Padden these days? And perhaps you may not be aware that Peppery Tom, with a batting mark of .316 up to today, is out in front of such slugging catchers as Gabby Hartnett, Ernie Lombardi, Spud Davis, Jimmy Wilson, Al Lopez, Earl Grace, Frank Hogan and Al Spohrer.

Encouraging, you say? Very much so, especially when we consider that the Pirate scouts in their quest of high-grade pitchers also were instructed to comb the bushes for an outstanding receiver.

TOM FINE FIELDER

Developments breaking around the brow of the New Hampshire Thomas in the past month have been very favorable. To show what he is capable of doing as a fielding catcher, Padden reeled off a play in the Labor Day doubleheader with the Cardinals at Forbes Field that won him hundreds of new backers.

The same Pepper Martin, who stole Mickey's glove in the 1931 world series, was on second when the batter hoisted a foul fly that soared to the distant rails. Padden sprinted toward the spot where the sphere was falling and risking painful injury he slid off the rail as he nailed the ball.

The capture in itself was sufficient to bring down the house, but Tommy knew better than any of the onlookers that the play was only half completed, for the best baserunner in the league was tagging up and ready to set sail for third. Padden caught his balance and got the ball to third in such a hurry that Pepper changed his mind about sprinting for the hot corner.

Another point in favor of Tom's future is to be seen in the fact that Waite Hoyt has pitched a lot to Padden as he staged his remarkable comeback. Hoyt recently paid the young receiver a big compliment, and others, including Manager Traynor, have praised Thomas on account of hustle and his knowledge in calling for the different pitches.

That Padden is the most improved ball player on the Bucco squad is the opinion of many who study the Pirates, and the fact that he has been in 66 games shows what his bosses think of him. Traynor is hoping that Tom will continue to show the pace displayed in the past month, and if he does, the Pittsburgh catching problem may be close to solution.

DUAL BILL TODAY

BOSTON, Sept. 8.—A doubleheader was on the Braves Field card for the Pirates and Braves this afternoon, rain yesterday causing a cancelation of the third scheduled contest. The dual bill of today will bring the four-game series to a close. The Pirates won the first two games and thus own a five-game winning streak.

Larry French and Waite Hoyt are due to work on the slab for the Buccos in the bargain bill. Fred Frankhouse and Walter Betts are ready to pitch for the Tribe.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: A LIFETIME IN 48 HOURS—On November 8, 1932, Suzanne Bouleau, of Le Mans, France, married Louis Touchet, who had been her admirer for many years. On November 9, 1932, a child was born of the union and on the same day the father committed suicide by drowning upon hearing of the birth.

GRIDDERS FACE ROAD CARD AT SWISSVALE

By JULIUS LEVIN

With only two lettermen available and a schedule which calls for nine games to be played away from home, the Swissvale High School football squad, under the coaching of Ed Paulie, is hard at work preparing for its opening game with Etna on Friday, September 21.

Ed Paulie

The original schedule arranged by Coach Paulie called for several home attractions, but Dixon Field, Swissvale's home gridiron, is undergoing a number of improvements and will not be available for football, hence it was necessary to play all contests abroad.

Paul Shultz, a quarterback, and Martin McTiernan, a tackle, the latter a brother of Buck McTiernan, the former middleweight fighter, are the only veterans to return.

Paulie reports his team this fall will be light and green. It will average around 150 pounds. The first team probably will find Onderick and Stockman at the ends, McTiernan and O'Brien at the tackles, Moses and Visper at the guards, Strawn at center, Shepherd and Zaccari at the halves, and Viott at fullback.

The schedule calls for games with Etna, Homestead, Arnold, Avalon, Duquesne, Marshall, Wilkinsburg, Braddock and Edgewood.

Facing an eight-game schedule and with the possibility of another being added to fill the open date on October 26, Homestead High School is pointing for its opener with Pitcairn next Friday night at Homestead. Coach Bill Campbell's team so far is carded to meet six class A opponents and two class AA rivals. Five of the games will be played at night. The schedule:

Friday, September 14, *Pitcairn; Friday, September 21, *Rankin; Friday, September 28, *Swissvale; Saturday, October 6, at McKeesport; Friday, October 12, *Open; Friday, October 19, *Braddock; Friday, October 26, open; Saturday, November 3, at Clairton; Saturday, November 10, Munhall.

Meyers Beat Wolffs For Highland Title

The Meyers, C. L. and Foster, won the Highland Country Club's father and sons golf title yesterday, turning in a card of 36-42—78 to lead Charles Sr. and Charles Jr. Wolff by a single stroke. The Roystons, defending champions, finished in third place with 80.

Dr. R. P. Boucek and R. C. Boucek and H. F. McKnight and A. G. McKnight shared the low net award with scores of 76.

Regis Wolff defeated Frank Nash, 1 up, in a quarter-final match for the club's individual championship.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8.—(AP)—May Hope Doeg, of Santa Monica, Cal., bidding for two national girls' tennis titles, has reached the finals of the doubles play yesterday with her California partner, Priscilla Merwin, to keep in winning form for the championship singles battle today.

The Pacific Coast duo conquered Ariel Stoot, of Seattle, and Virginia Hollinger, Dayton, O., 6-2, 6-3, in their march to the finals.

Pin Star Records Sixteenth 300 Score

WILKES-BARRE, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Wyoming Valley's ace bowler, Jack Tarutis, yesterday scored his third perfect score of 300 in three days, his fourth in a week and his sixteenth in 18 months. The 40-year-old commission merchant bowled five games, scoring an average of 240 and winding up with 300.

PENNANT-BOUND TIGERS AND GIANTS RUN INTO SETBACKS

BENGALS LOSE PAIR TO A'S; BRUINS WIN

Associated Press.

While the Detroit Tigers and New York Giants appear headed straight for the 1934 world series, occasional obstacles in their courses emphasize the fact that they haven't clinched their pennants yet.

Both stumbled yesterday and the consequences came close to being serious for the Tigers. Detroit ran into its first double-header defeat of the season, losing a pair of 5-to-4 decisions to the Athletics, but luckily for the Tigers, the cellar-dwelling White Sox upset the Yankees, 6 to 5, leaving New York five games behind.

The Giants ran into a "jinx" pitcher, Lou Warneke, and yielded to the third-place Chicago Cubs, 4 to 2, but as all other National League teams were kept idle by rain the Giants lost only a half game and lead the second-place St. Louis Cardinals by 6½ games.

The A's home run duo of Jimmy Foxx and Bob Johnson were the principal instruments of Detroit's downfall.

Lou Gehrig remained two homers ahead of Foxx by belting his forty-third against the White Sox, but that wasn't enough as Chicago tied the score in the seventh and won out in the ninth when relief pitcher Lefty Gomez passed Luke Appling and Manager Jimmy Dykes sent him home with a double. It was Gomez's fourth defeat against 24 victories, ending his 10-game winning streak.

Washington and St. Louis fifth-place rivals in the American League, divided a doubleheader. The Senators won the opener, 7-4, then the Browns went 12 innings for a 3-2 decision.

BOXERS ENTER FINAL STAGE

Both Vince Dundee, of Newark, N. J., the world middleweight boxing champion, and Ted Yarosz, of Monaca, foremost challenger, today were staging their next to last workouts for their 15-round titular battle at Forbes Field Tuesday night while interest among the fans was mounting to fever pitch.

Dundee, who worked out yesterday at the Pittsburgh Lyceum, was to box with spar mates at Hickey Park, Millvale, this afternoon, while Teddy was engaging in a similar drill at his Conneaut Lake camp. Both will wind up their conditioning tomorrow. Yarosz will break camp immediately after his Sunday drill and go to his home in Monaca, coming here just in time to weigh in on Tuesday.

TO WEIGH IN PRIVATE

Announcement was made today that the weighing and examining of the boxers in the Boxing Commission headquarters, 1007 Law and Finance building, at 3 p. m. Tuesday will be private, confined to the boxers, managers, seconds, commission officials and newspapermen. The preliminary boxers will not be weighed until the main-bouters have been disposed of.

Setting at rest reports that out-of-town officials had been decided upon to handle the main bout, Boxing Commissioner W. D. McClelland today declared that he would not make any announcement about these important personages until the men enter the ring. A group of officials will be notified to be on hand, and none of them will know who will be sent into the ring and judges' chairs until just before Dundee and Yarosz enter the ring. Commissioners Farrell and Nelson, from the eastern end of the state, are expected to be on hand as guests of the local commissioner at Pittsburgh's first championship match.

PRELIMS ARRANGED

A switch has been made in the two eight-round preliminaries whereby Paul Pirrone, of Cleveland, will box Al Diamond, of Paterson, N. J., Dundee's stablemate, in the semi-final, which will go on after the main bout, while Young Stuhley, of Chicago, will box Al Salbano, of Texas, in the first main preliminary just before the windup. Originally, Pirrone was paired with Salbano and Stuhley with Diamond.

The other preliminaries, all six-rounders, have been sanctioned by the boxing commission as follows:

DURIS STOPS BRUNO

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., sept. 8.—(AP.)—Jack Dempsey, former king of heavyweights, last night refereed a series of fights in which Mickey Duris, 140, of Johnstown, knocked out Bobby Bruno, 141, of New York, in the main bout. The haymaker came in the second round of a scheduled six-round encounter.

Harpster on Football

Carnegie Mentor Reveals New Spheroid Already Has Been Changed

By HOWARD HARPSTER

Every year, following the football season, cries are heard from various sections of the country for changes in the rules. Leaders in these crusades for new interpretations often are well-known coaches whose opinions carry much weight.

Generally speaking, the changes suggested are meant for the good of the game, although it is difficult to determine what that good of the game may be, when there are so many varied opinions on the subject. Once in a long while a coach whose team has lost a game or two because of a certain rule will be able to have the rule changed to satisfy his personal grievance.

Mr. Harpster

In the past, the rules committee has been all too willing to make changes, and the result was a very unhealthy state of affairs. No one, not even the officials, was absolutely certain of which rules were governing the current season, because changes had been made so often that it was very confusing. Last year, officials made several very serious mistakes in some of the big games.

NEW BALL UNPLAYABLE

A good example of what I mean in saying that the rules committee has been too willing to make changes is to be found in the new ball in use this year. For many years football has been played with a certain sized ball. No one has experienced any difficulty in using this ball. It was easy to pass, catch and kick, and nothing more could be asked.

But someone got a brilliant idea and the first thing anyone knew we had a new dimensioned ball. The rules committee had changed the size of the football without having built one to meet the dimensions and no one knew whether or not the ball would work.

The first balls of the new style came out during the spring practice sessions, and, when we got ours at Carnegie Tech we found them to be longer, narrower and shaped very much like a Zeppelin. They looked great, but so does the idea of perpetual motion.

When the ball was kicked it spiraled up for 10 or 20 yards and then went into a crazy flutter like a tail-spinning airship. When passed, it zipped through the air much faster than the old ball, and, because it was very narrow, it was slippery and very difficult to catch. Then, too, when it rolled on the ground it was much more difficult to handle than the old balls.

MODEL FINALLY CHANGED

We protested strongly, along with many other colleges, to the manufacturers, and finally succeeded in getting the shape changed so that the latest balls are playable.

This year we find a few more changes in the rules, but, in fairness to the rules committee, it must be stated that these changes are in response to the demand of a great majority. The committee realizes that too many changes have been occurring each year, and it is its intention to make these few final adjustments and then allow the rules to remain intact. This is a splendid idea.

In my next article I will tell of the more important changes for the coming season.

TARTAN GUARD BREAKS ARM

By JESS CARVER

If the collegiate football season continues as it has started out, it's going to be a tough old year for the guards.

First it was George Rado, all-Eastern guard in 1933, co-captain of the Dukes, to go on the hospital list. Rado, in a general run down condition, has been ordered to take a rest for an indefinite period. Yesterday, at Carnegie Tech, they discovered that John Anderson, leading candidate for a varsity guard position, had suffered a partial fracture of the lower bone in his left arm. He'll be on the shelf until mid-season at least.

Coaches Harpster and Lovewell plan to give their Skibo hopefuls a taste of real scrimmage today. The battling will take place during the morning session.

Pitt's varsity squad, 50 strong under the chaperonage of Head Coach Dr. John Bain Sutherland, is due to depart, via bus, for its mountain training camp outside of Windber, Pa., at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon. The Panthers will remain in the mountains for two weeks.

Patroni Golf Leader

Unknown Assistant Pro Leads Field in Glens Falls Open Tourney

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Duplicating his par cracking 69 of the previous day, Jack Patroni, assistant professional of the Wykagyl Club, of New Rochelle, yesterday paced a field of 111 shot-makers through the second round of the sixth annual Glens Falls open, which saw par blasted 10 times and equaled 11.

Rolling home in one of the last threesomes of the day, Patroni nosed out Ky Laffoon, Denver, and Willie MacFarlane, of Tuckahoe, former national open titleholder, by a single stroke for the half-way mark lead.

Laffoon, who shared the lead at the end of the first round yesterday with Clarence Clark, of Bloomfield, N. J., at 68, had to bag a birdie 2 on the home green for a par 71 to tie for second place with MacFarlane, who added a 69 to his 70 of Thursday.

Two shots behind the leader, between the Laffoon-MacFarlane combination in second place and Clark and Picard, were Billy Burke, of Chagrin Falls, O., former winner; Willie Klein, of Williston, Long Island champion; Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J., and Johnny O'Connor, of nearby Bolton Landing. All four shot subpar golf to post the 36-hole aggregate of 140.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—A wild scramble for the national amateur softball championship will take place here this afternoon at spacious Lincoln Park field with 40 men's and women's teams from the United States and Canada striving for the most coveted prize of all. The tournament is being conducted by the Chicago American, a Hearst newspaper, in conjunction with the Amateur Softball Association of America.

Twenty games will be disposed of today in the first round with four games being played simultaneously at 12:45, 2, 3:45 and 5 p. m. Central Daylight time. Play will be continued through until Monday with the semi-finals and finals listed for Monday morning and afternoon.

The Pittsburgh champions, the East Liberty Shamrocks, who qualified for the national event by taking over all opposition in chalking up 11 straight victories, have the Cudahy Puritans, of Kansas City, for their opposition in the opening round.

OSKIN TO HURL

The Cannon Balls, of Parkersburg, W. Va., the only other Pittsburgh district team in the event, will encounter the Washington (D. C.) Heralds. Both games will get under way at 12:45 o'clock.

Yesterday morning the Pittsburgh champions held their final workout in preparation for today's contest. Oskin looked very good in the practice session as did the entire Shamrock squad.

PLAYERS WELCOMED

A parade at Lincoln Park, starting at 11:30 o'clock, will precede the opening of the tournament. Mayor Kelly and President Dunham of the Park board, officially will welcome more than 300 players in the name of Chicago.

The J. L. Friedmans' of Chicago, defending champions, who failed to place in the city tourney this year, automatically qualified for this year's event as did the Briggs Body team, of Detroit, which finished in the runner-up position.

Elmer Sizes 'Em Up

By ELMER F. LAYDEN

Member All America Board of Football.

(Registered U. S. Patent Office.)

If any other reminder were needed that King Football again is dusting off his crown, it was provided by the justly publicized spectacle in Chicago, August 31, between the Chicago Bears, the professional team, and the all-star college team picked by the fans of the country.

This game had all the earmarks of a real college game, even down to the "bear" stories from the coaches, reports of practice, and accounts of injuries which were supposed to hamper seriously the chances of either team. In fact, the only complaint not heard from either camp was that all the best men had been lost by graduation. The all-stars consisted entirely of members of the class of 1934, and thus Coach Noble Kizer and his assistants got all their men by graduation instead of losing them. Coach George Halas never suffers from graduation losses with his Bears. Red Grange and Link Lyman, the star halfback and tackle, respectively, have more than a decade of professional football behind them, and they're just as agile as ever.

Elmer Layden

The game was a sight worth seeing, but I doubt whether it proved anything. The only game which could ever come close to proving whether a good professional team could beat a good college team, or vice versa, would be a post-season contest between the national champions in both categories. And the breaks of one game might still leave the issue in doubt.

DIFFICULT QUESTION

Perhaps a series of three games would go further to settle the question. But then certain concession would have to be made by one side or the other regarding rules, which differ somewhat for the simon pures and the paid players, and no matter what the outcome of the game, these rules concessions would be invoked by the losing side.

I prefer to leave this mighty question up to the members of the hot stove league and to ponder the question whether Andy Pilney, Don Elser and Bill Shakespeare, of our squad, will prove to be as good punters with the new ball.

It's a bit early to start predicting, but from all appearances the Big Ten race will be just as stiff as ever, and probably more spectacular than usual.

Michigan appears to be as strong as last year when the Wolverines won the conference title. Minnesota, which tied Michigan, has every regular on hand except Roy Oen, diminutive center. Iowa lost two key men in Joe Laws, quarterback, and Francis Schammel, guard, but again will be strong. Purdue, which suffered its first defeat in 21 games at the hands of Iowa, lost 20 of its 30 lettermen, but even Coach Kizer is whistling "It Don't Mean a Thing."

OHIO STATE REBUILDS

Ohio State lost four valuable linemen in Conrad and Rosequist, tackles; Gailus, guard, and Sid Gillman, end, but the backfield is intact and the new coach Francis Schmidt should be able to dig up some adequate linemen to replace them. Illinois, which is definitely on the upgrade, has seven regulars and five other lettermen returning from the team which finished two points out of a tie for first, and Coach Bob Zuppke is on the verge of making predictions.

Six of the 10 look like potential champions. With Bo McMillan at the helm, Indiana promises to be a real threat this year. The former star of the "Praying Colonels" has 16 lettermen as a nucleus, and if anyone can break the Hoosier football slump, he's the man.

Chicago, largely because of the ability of Jay Berwanger, the Dubuque flash, is looking for a great season. After opening with Carroll, the Maroons must play six conference teams in seven games. Missouri being the "breather." Doc Spears is just hitting his stride at Wisconsin, and, although they're not saying much, the Madison fans look at you with a knowing eye.

BROUILLARD SCORES O. K.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—(INS.)—Lou Brouillard, Worcester, Mass., moved nearer a second middleweight championship bout today with his technical knockout victory over Solly Dukelsky, of Chicago, in the seventh round here last night. Honus Says:

By HONUS WAGNER

To the Sports Editor:

You know why I talk so much about other things than baseball in this space? Lots of people who read news and editorials turn to the sports page to find out what is going on there. So I am going to give the sports readers an idea of what is happening in the rest of the world. I'll bet they never would find out otherwise. For instance, how many heard about the skeleton being found in India of a man 31½ feet tall. What a pitcher that guy would make. What a pitcher!

MADDEN GAINS NET FINAL

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A. contender, and Bob Madden, Pitt youngster, whose play as a member of the University Club squad and as holder of both district junior titles this year, has stamped him Pittsburgh's most promising comer, meet this afternoon for singles honors of the twenty-eighth annual Beaver County net championships on the American Bridge Company gallery court at Ambridge. Today's tilt offers the Winged Header opportunity to land his fourth Beaver bauble. Madden will be making his initial bid for the coronet.

In the doubles wind-up, Madden and his Bellevue partner, Bob Lampus, will encounter King Moore, former Big Ten dual premier, and the writer. Madden and Lampus gained the final yesterday by a hard-fought victory over Bobby Grier and Paul Massey, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4.

It is understood that the roster of notables slated to assemble for the Allegheny County Club turf court invitation classic, beginning at Sewickley next Tuesday, will include Chuck Garland, former home ace and present Chicago veteran, and Lawrence Baker, Washington luminary and secretary of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

STOCKS DRIFT IN QUIET MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 — Fractional gains and recessions were about evenly divided in the dull early stock market trading today. Metals were quiet.

United States Smelting was steady after its recent sharp declines. Santa Fe, United States Steel, General Motors and Schenley Distillers were also about even. United States Industrial Alcohol got up around a point. Slight losses were recorded by American Telephone, McIntyre, du Pont, Westinghouse and Montgomery Ward.

Aside from hopes for an agreement to end the textile strike, Wall street found some encouragement in studying the weekly carloading figures and automobile production estimates.

A greater-than-seasonal gain of 40,264 cars in freight movement last week was due largely to an increase of 19,174 in coal loadings, but next to coal the biggest gain was in movement of miscellaneous freight.

Cram's reports estimated automobile output this week had increased 5,580 units to 32,588, on a recovery from the let-down in the week preceding Labor Day. In the same week last year output was 43,121 units.

Indications point to a September output of about 200,000 cars, the smallest since January, according to Cram's.

Leading active commodities have been moving in a narrow range for the past two weeks, but the Bureau of Labor Statistics wholesale commodity price index, based on a wide range of goods, advanced six-tenths of a point to 77.5, a new peak for the year and the fifth consecutive weekly rise.

Cotton cloth production in the week preceding Labor Day increased substantially as mills speeded up in anticipation of the textile strike. The Cotton Textile Institute estimated output for the week amounted to 110,000,000 yards compared with 95,291,000 the previous week.

The British pound opened at $5.00⅛, up ⅛ of a cent. French francs were up .00⅛ of a cent at 6.68⅛ cents.

WHEAT PRICES TILT UP

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—An upward trend of wheat prices became manifest early today. Indications pointed to a broadening of European demand for Canadian wheat, and it was stated that export business in progress totaled larger than had been acknowledged.

Opening at ⅛ off to ⅛ up, December new 1.07½-¾, wheat afterward rose all around. Corn started unchanged to ¼ lower, December new 80½-⅜, and subsequently advanced.

National Steel Ignores Salary Reduction

By GEORGE H. SNYDER
Business Editor

THE NATIONAL STEEL Corporation does not intend to follow the lead of the United States Steel Corporation and other steel companies in imposing a five day week on office workers with corresponding reductions in salaries. This declaration was made by Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the board, following his return from a six week vacation in Bermuda. Displaying a healthy coat of tan, the outstanding individualist of the steel industry attributed the current dullness in business to labor troubles, chief of which is the textile strike. He expressed the opinion that the labor situation has been responsible for the uncertainty in the minds of individuals and corporation heads, since no one knows when a strike will deprive him of his earning power.

Mr. Snyder

Clarification of the meaning of Section 7 A of the National Industrial Recovery Act was seen by Mr. Weir as a matter of the utmost importance for the restoration of business confidence. This section is the one dealing with collective bargaining between employers and employes.

* * *

National to Fight Government Suit

MR. WEIR declared that he has every intention of continuing his fight against the suit brought by the government charging coersion and unfair tactics in the last election of the employes' representatives. In discussing this case he said:

"Our contention is that we have already had our election. Federal representatives were asked to supervise that election. They didn't do it. The election was held anyhow, and now they are suing us. The election was fair and we did not use coersion.

"If we permitted another election, it would be an admission of guilt. Our skirts are clear and we expect to win the case."

Shows Confidence In Nation's Future

WHILE HE admitted his company is working at the lowest rate in its history, Mr. Weir takes an optomistic attitude toward the long range future of the United States. In speaking of experiments being undertaken by the present administration, he said that the American people will sift down new policies and throw out what is useless. When asked what he thought of Henry Ford's steel expansion program as an indication of confidence in the present administration, Mr. Weir said:

"Ford's move is not an indication of confidence in any administration. It is an indication of confidence in the United States. National Steel is considering spending $12,000,000 for new mills in the Detroit district."

When asked if he thought that the country is becoming more socialistic in its attitude, he said, that every one is becoming more socialistic in his thinking from a broad standpoint. As an example he mentioned the fact that he favors old age pensions and employment insurance while 20 or 30 years ago such ideas on the part of a business leader would have been considered radical.

Corporate Earnings

American Fruit Growers, Inc., report for the year ended June 30, 1934, shows net loss of $169,501 which compares with net loss of $418,427 in the preceding fiscal year. Bank loans were reduced to $515,196 from $815,157 and purchase money obligations were cut from $591,271 to $352,126. Cash totalled $705,878.

Schenley Distillers Corporation and subsidiaries reports net earnings after taxes and charges for the six months ending June 30, last, of $4,272,567, equivalent to approximately $4.07 per share of capital stock. The company was not in business during the corresponding period of last year, so there are no comparable figures for 1933. The statement for the first quarter of 1934, however, showed net of $3,214,3358, or $3.06 a share. The report for the first half, therefore, indicates substantial curtailment of earnings during the second quarter.

'HISSES' MARK BOND PROBE

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Sept. 7. — Dayton Keith, chairman of the Bondholders Protective Committee for 169 defaulted real estate bond issues floated by the American Bond & Mortgage Company, took the witness stand today in the Congressional inquiry into alleged racketeering by protective committees.

Keith's testimony was frequently interrupted by hisses and boos from the crowd which packed the courtroom when he testified he could not live on $15,000 a year.

The Congressmen conducting the inquiry are A. J. Sabath, of Chicago, Thomas O'Malley, of Milwaukee, and Everett McKinley, of Pekin, Ill.

Keith testified that the protective committee members were to ceive five per cent of the outstanding bonds when any property is reorganized. It was then that he admitted that he himself received $10,000 a year from the management of the properties and $5,000 as chairman of the committee.

HOUSING LOAN BAN LIFTED

Scope of the President's building renovating campaign was broadened by more than 100 per cent in the Pittsburgh district today with the lifting of the delinquent tax ban from loan applications.

In the past, no property owner could receive a modernizing loan under Title I, of the National Housing Act unless all taxes were paid and his property was free of liens.

The new ruling, according to Edward B. Lee, district administrator, leaves the matter to the discretion of the individual lending institutions. He declared:

"In my opinion, this will more than double the field in which the National Housing Act can operate in this district."

HARRISBURG, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Gasoline tax collections for the last three months jumped $317,342 or 3.6 per cent over the same period last year, the Department of Revenue reports.

Receipts from June 1 to August 31 were $9,138,335, compared with $8,820,993 in the same three months last year.

Ickes Approves Drilling Costs

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—The Petroleum Administrative Board announced that Secretary Ickes had approved fair costs for oil drilling operations in Washington and Greene counties and the Bradford area of Western Pennsylvania.

A minimum price of $1.75 a foot was approved for Washington and Greene counties. For the Bradford area the footage minimum was placed at 93 cents.

Denies Criticism Of Incinerator Vote

C. V. Shoup, executive director of the Allegheny Real Estate Owners' and Taxpayers' League, denies that he criticized members of Council who voted for the new city incinerators. In a letter to John J. Kane, councilman who recently scored Shoup as "running around building up a personal organization," Shoup declared his opposition was only to placing an incinerator in a thickly populated district.

Tainted Ham Blamed For Poisoning Vets

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—More than 100 of the 350 war veterans who were stricken with ptomaine poisoning at the national military home here were still confined to the hospital today. Col. James Mattison, commandant of the hospital and chief medical officer, said that boiled ham, served to the veterans, probably was tainted.

Road Resurfacing Starts at Finleyville

HARRISBURG, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—The Department of Highways announced today that a stretch of two miles of highway on Route 88 near Finleyville, Washington County, is being resurfaced.

Samuel S. Lewis, secretary, said traffic over the road is being maintained for night and weekend driving.

Flood of Silver Gluts Storage Facilities

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Such a flood of silver has come into the hands of the Federal Treasury in the past few weeks that the Government's storing capacity has become taxed to the limit.

In order to find more space, the Treasury has resumed possession of the old United States assay office on Wall street, next to the sub-treasury building, closed two years ago, and has begun enlarging its vault space.

It is said, that silver coming into the country at San Francisco from China will be stored in the San Francisco mint's vaults.

STOCKS OF OIL INCREASE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Stocks of domestic and foreign crude oil were reported today by the Oil Administration at 337,194,000 barrels on September 1, an advance of 250,000 over the 336,944,000 on hand a week before.

Domestic crude stocks mounted 86,000 barrels and foreign, 64,000.

The administration said reports from the industry indicated that the daily average crude output dropped from 2,530,000 in the week closed August 25 to 2,487,000 in the following week. Runs to stills declined 115,000 barrels to a daily average of 2,520,000 in the week of September 1. Imports rose appreciably to a daily average of 106,000 barrels.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Production of crude oil throughout the world in the first half of 1934 totaled 733,162,796 barrels, an increase of 7.7 per cent over the 680,585,975 barrels produced in the first half of 1933, according to "World Petroleum," an international oil trade journal.

United States production amounted to 448,680,000 barrels, compared with 433,230,000 last year, an increase of 3.5 per cent.

CAR LOADINGS GAIN 40,264

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—The American Railway Association announced that loadings of revenue freight for the week ended September 1 were 645,780 cars, an increase of 40,264 above the preceding week, but 27,998 cars under 1933 and an increase of 84,455 above 1932.

Miscellaneous freight loaded during the week totaled 233,538 cars, an increase of 12,177 above the preceding week, 521 above 1933 and 36,924 above 1932.

Less than car lot merchandise was 162,839 cars, an increase of 2,154 over the preceding week, but 9,384 below 1933 and 11,506 below 1932.

Nation's Bank Clearings

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—In spite of the short week and the interruption of business by the holidays at the opening of the month, bank clearings showed some improvement over the returns of the periods immediately preceding. The total this week for all leading cities in the United States, as reported by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $3,515,269,000 against $3,677,222,000 for the same week of last year, a loss of 4.4 per cent. This contrasts with a decline of 7.4 per cent in the previous week. At New York City, clearings were $2,217,133,000, a reduction of 12.5 per cent, while the aggregate for centers outside of New York of $1,298,136,000 was 13.4 per cent nigher.

At some of the larger cities, especially those in the East and West, the week both this year and last, covers only five business days. Furthermore, the heavier settlements incident to the opening of the new month also appear. The total this week, however, was less than that for the preceding week by 106,169,000 whereas a year ago for the same two weeks there was a decline due to the short week. Relatively, this week's showing was better than that of a year ago.

Boston again was the only city outside of New York reporting a loss. At most of the other points, substantial gains appeared, among these being Philadelphia, Buffalo, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Amaha, Baltimore, Atlanta, New Orleans, Louisville, Dallas, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle.

Figures at the leading centers showing increase and decreases as compared with those of last year, are printed herwith; also, daily bank clearings each month for the year to date:

European Speculators Reported 'Locked In' on Short Sales of U. S. Dollar

According to gossip in foreign exchange circles, a substantial European short interest is locked up in the dollar. There has been foreign selling of the American currency lately on the belief the domestic price of gold would be raised to the full extent allowed by law and that treasury buying of silver abroad would weaken its position. As some observers see it, the battle over the dollar is a tussle between European speculators in foreign exchange and the American stabilization fund. With its $2,000,000,000 stabilization ammunition obtained from dollar revaluation profits and its power to buy silver abroad, the treasury seems to have most of the strength on its side, to start with anyway.

Intervention of the American stabilization fund to support the dollar and hold it above the gold export point, it was predicted, would reduce or terminate the import movement of silver as well as the outflow of gold. Exports of gold from New York recently were attributed in part to treasury purchases of silver abroad. This week's Federal Reserve statements shows a decline of $18,000,000 in monetary gold stocks following a drop of $2,000,000 in that item the previous week, when the metal loss was the first since the country adopted a modified gold standard last January. The $20,000,000 loss in monetary gold the past two weeks is negligible compared with the country's gains this year. Since the dollar was revalued January 31, the monetary gold stock of the United States has increased in round figures $1,150,000,000 and totals $7,963,000,000.

United States Smelting & Refining earnings predictions in some quarters which figure the statistics closely ranged as high as $15 a share for 1934. In fact, those prophecies persisted in the face of the break in the stock. The market, however, plainly has been skeptical. The better-grade metal shares this year have commanded prices about ten times earnings estimates. The year's peak for United States Smelting, duplicated Thursday before its plunge started, was 141. Earnings in the first five months of this year, with gold bringing $35 an ounce and silver fluctuating above 40 cents an ounce, amounted to $3.43 a share and were stated to be at the rate of $8.25 a share for the year.

Retirement of the Fisher brothers from the General Motors Corporation interests the Street. It is wondered if they will take a bigger hand in the securities market, in which they have always been interested. In the big bull markets the Fisher brothers were frequently mentioned in connection with buying and selling large quantities of stocks in various groups.

Business already placed with Briggs Manufacturing Company next year has necessitated added equipment as well as additions and alterations of its plants, the completion of which is expected by October 1, this year. Inasmuch as Briggs is not in the steel business it will not be affected by the Ford Motor Company's steel expansion program, excepting that it will buy steel sheets direct from the Ford Motor Company instead of through Ford as heretofore.

The American Glass Review says, in part: "Activity in glass producing factories during the week just ended holds at its former levels while manufacturers await new impetus from the advancing fall trade. The present moment, which marks the transition from one season to another, is customarily a quiet one and there are no reactions of unusual proportions to make this year an exception. In the flat glass division producers report that the general situation has varied little from its previous course. Towards the close of the week sales of window glass were somewhat better than what recent daily averages."

GOVERNMENT SHOWS CONCERN OVER CREDIT

By LEWIS HANEY,
Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—We are apparently in another one of those periods of talk about conservative government finance and "soft-pedaling" inflation. Thursday, government bonds spurted and "inflation stocks" declined. Evidently the dollar was supported in foreign exchange.

The administration seems to be more concerned about its credit than at any other time and there are some indications that it has resorted to supporting dollar exchange for the first time.

This is tardy recognition of the importance of the monetary tinkering as affecting public finance. It should have been clear all along that money is just the tool of credit, and that all that has been done to unsettle and depreciate the dollar would inevitably shake credit of all kinds, including the government's.

NOT SUFFICIENT

Unfortunately, tinkering with stabilization funds to "support" the currency or the bond market is not sufficient. It is just dealing with symptoms and scratching surfaces. The cause of the trouble is not touched.

What is the cause?

The answer is plain. It lies in (1) a false idea of money, and in (2) a false theory of government.

As to money, the root idea of the administration is that money can be manufactured by government and can be juggled at will. They consider money as being just credit. Theirs is essentially a fiat theory of money.

THE METALLIC BASE

They prate about "the metallic base" for our money, but they refuse to base our money on metal. They talk of a 59-cent gold dollar, but there are no such dollars. Try to get one! The only practical use they make of "devaluation" is to write up a paper profit on the government's books, which they proceed to spend in a way calculated to inflate our currency.

And what does this theoretical gold dollar mean, when they proceed to dilute it by adding 25 per cent silver? And what does silver mean when they take 43 cents silver and call it $1.29? (There is only about 39 cents worth of silver in a silver dollar).

The plain fact is that we are not on the gold standard, or on the silver standard, or on any standard at all. The government has a lot of gold. It is paying ridiculous prices for a lot of silver. But you and I have nothing and can get nothing but the government paper which is dealt out to us by the New Dealers.

Our currency is not convertible into any metal. Even the exports of gold are permissive, are limited to certain countries, and may be stopped any time. "There is a real possibility of further "devaluation."

NO GOLD DOLLARS

One great reason why prices have not risen in proportion to the devaluation of the gold dollar is that there are no gold dollars! It proves that the theoretical gold dollar is not the standard.

But, you say, the government's credit is good, and we have the same dollar bills. Well, "bills" is good. "Bills" imply debt, and of that there is plenty.

Here is where the false theory of government comes in. A government of social standing planning and regimentation and bureaucracy and doles is a government of spending. It is a government of debts and unbalanced budgets.

The New Deal government is spending billions of money. It has to "make" this money. It does so by borrowing! And it has seized the banking system in order to force the banks to lend to it.

Also it has forced us to take 59 per cent and 39 cent dollars for our 100 cent dollars.

No government can spend indefinitely without injuring its credit. The recent periods of weakness in government bonds and the dollar are the handwriting on the wall.

War Office Lets Truck Contracts

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—The War Department has announced the award of contracts for 3,236 trucks at $2,671,687.

Two of the contracts for 3,133 trucks were awarded the Fargo Motor Corporation, Detroit, for $2,596,937.

A contract for 101 trucks was awarded the Chevrolet Motor Company, Flint, Mich., for $71,365 and another to the Reo Motor Car Company, Lansing, Mich., for two trucks for $3,384.

Bond Market Awaiting Federal Financing

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Investment bankers, with hopes of an early revival of corporate financing dashed by the slump in the bond market last month, are now awaiting the new Treasury financing in the hope that it may mark a turn for the better.

Much of the unsettlement in the bond market is traced to the sag in the United States Government issues since July. This decline was presumably due in part to the stirring up of inflationary sentiment with the nationalization of silver.

The root of the trouble, however, in the opinion of a number of bond market analysts, was the too rapid issuance of federal guaranteed issues of the Home Owners Loan and Federal Farm Mortgage corporations at a time when the Treasury's own obligations had risen to the highest level for the post war period, save for a short time in 1928, with the long term issues yielding less than 2¾ per cent on the average.

As the market became overloaded, it started to sag, and soon a series of adverse influences began to pile up, so that the movement gathered momentum and volume like a rolling snowball.

If the Treasury "puts over with a bang" the refunding of its $525,000,000 certificates maturing September 15 and the $1,200,000,000 of liberties called for payment October 15, bankers believe the whole investment market should take on a healthier tone, which might, within a reasonable time, permit a resumption of corporate financing of fair proportions. The Treasury financing is to be announced Monday.

WILLARD URGES RATE RAISE

ROCHESTER, Sept. 8.—Daniel F. Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, stated that an increase in freight rates to railroads is imperative if railroads are to remain solvent. He said:

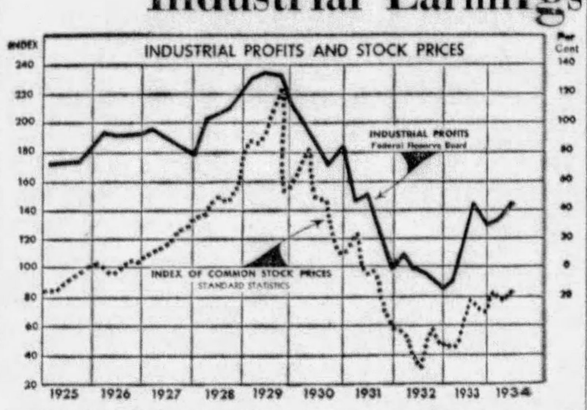
"I am not a pessimist. I believe the railroads are going ahead provided other means of transportation are placed under regulations similar to the carriers and we get our increased rates."

Barber Is Cleared Of Wife's Slaying

SHARON, Pa., Sept. 8.—(INS.)—Peter Jemme, Farrell barber, today was exonerated by the county grand jury of a charge of murder brought after his young wife was shot and killed at the home of her parents.

The wife, Mrs. Ida Jemme, 22, died from bullet wounds last July shortly after returning to her parents' home from work in a restaurant. She was said to have been estranged from Jemme.

Stock Prices Follow Industrial Earnings



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE

This chart presents two series of vital interest to recovery as well as to business management and the investors.

Since the country is still essentially in a competitive economy where profit constitutes the incentive for the businessman, this margin between cost and return is the natural stimulus, which induces men to take risks and carry on commerce and trade. It is, therefore, a fair generalization that the will to recover on the part of the able businessman, in whose hands it lies, depends to a very large degree upon the margin of profit which appears to him as an incentive.

Assurances by administration officials have not been taken at their face value because businessmen discern the following conditions which have a far more important bearing upon profits than anything which Washington might say:

The labor policy of the government seeks to increase the buying power of the workingman to which businessmen have no objection. The trouble is that wages must come from the price of finished products and the businessman finds it difficult to increase the pay of his workers before his own income rises.

The sudden changes which take place in conditions of production introduce an element of serious risk in all contracts with the result that a business man never knows from the time that he makes an engagement until its fulfillment, whether he is likely to come out in the black or in the red.

The higher labor and material costs resulting from the NRA reduces the period of time during which industry can make a profit and increases the interval during which losses must occur.

Businessmen fear that the right of co-operation which has been instrumental in eliminating competitive abuses will be denied and only the wage and employment conditions in the NRA retained.

The increasing costs of government presage a sharp rise in taxes and this must come from business profits. Since they are a first charge upon income it follows necessarily that residual profits will suffer.

Government competition is a direct threat to profits and is evident in some of the relief work as well as in the government's power policy.

If the tariff theories of Secretary Wallace are applied, it may mean a complete breakdown of American living standards which will be preceded by widespread industrial bankruptcy.

STEEL TRADE MODERATELY HOPEFUL

By B. E. V. LUTY

Regularly at this time of year the steel trade expects a marked increase in activity by reason of the ending on Labor Day of the regular vacation season. This time it has an extra reason, liquidation of stocks buyers accumulated in May and June on account of price considerations.

Sometimes expectations of improvement after Labor Day have not been realized while occasionally improvement has begun in the late days of August.

As a few days are required for buyers to reach conclusions and make up orders, seasonal improvement if coming would not be expected to begin before next week or the week after.

Apparently the holiday has had a temporary adverse influence for the steel market in general has been duller in the last ten days or two weeks than formerly.

Average production of steel ingots in the last five days of this week has been at 18 to 19 per cent of capacity. Scarcely any steel was made on the holiday but by rule Labor Day is not a steel mill holiday and in the American Iron and Steel Institute's report of production this month it will be counted as a working day in computing the average daily rate in tons and the percentage of capacity.

The steel trade is far from taking more than a moderately hopeful view of its nearby future, observing that the general business situation just now is not especially promising.

INGOT OUTPUT OFF

The decrease of about one-third in the ingot producing rate from that of two or three weeks in the latter part of July, analysis shows, was due to a few special influences, and widespread or general decline is seen. Rail production was at a good rate and has since ceased, while orders for freight car material are largely completed. Steel requirements of the tin plate mills had a seasonal decrease. The automobile industry took little steel in July but it took still less in August. These influences account for substantially all the decrease in steel production there has been in the last six weeks.

The disappointing thing is that there was not an increase, by exhaustion of buyers' stocks more than offsetting the three unfavorable influences. There was stocking in merchant bars, wire products, sheets, strips and tubular goods. Stocks of all except the last named are still in evidence. Mills can tell from the smallness of the individual orders received and the miscellaneous character of the specifications that buyers still have stocks and are simply placing orders to piece out or fill in.

STOCKS PLAYING OUT

These stocks have lasted much longer than producers expected, and no doubt longer than the buyers expected, but it is regarded as reasonably certain that they will not last much longer.

In the case of tubular goods there was a price incentive to stock, but on account of the consignment system prevailing so generally the stocking was relatively limited. Demand has been increasing since early in July, and tubular goods are relatively active, constituting the one bright spot in the current steel market situation.

Demand is well balanced between oil country goods and standard pipe, and in view of the virtual absence of building it is held that much repair work must be in progress, representing an accumulation of several years.

The automobile industry has placed a few orders for steel against the forthcoming new models, small, but of sufficient size to show that the steel is for regular production and not for experimental purposes. Orders of size are expected to begin appearing in a week or two. Production of current models has been decreasing rapidly.

The scrap market has remained in absolutely stagnant condition. Heavy melting steel is called $10.50 to $11, the range to which appraisals reduced it over a week ago.

HOTELS FIGHT BLUE EAGLE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—NRA officials, virtually conceding victims of the hotel business that nine months' operation under the Blue Eagle had demonstrated "the impossibility of full code compliance," were faced today with the question of what to do about it.

Hotel officials sought modification of the code, but their suggestions were resisted by NRA officials.

Recovery spokesmen said they were hamstrung in seeking enforcement of the hotel code by two important factors—the intrastate character of the business and the lack of employe organization. One official said:

"Only about two per cent of the hotel employes are organized."

NRA was in receipts of a resolution adopted by the code committee of the American Hotel Association urging an executive order exempting from the code provisions all hotels which had been unable to earn operating expenses, taxes, interest and insurance charges.

SANITY PROBE IN KIDNAPING

FINCASTLE, Va., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Judge A. C. Buchanan has announced that a sanity hearing would be held to determine the mental condition of Maj. Robert C. Kent, Jr., on trial for the kidnaping of Mrs. Mary J. Hastings.

He indicated the inquiry would go into the past and present mental condition of the defendant.

The sanity hearing was not asked by either defense or prosecution, but was directed by the court. The committee was told that it need not confine itself to current findings, but could consult hospital and other pertinent records.

In apparently labored answers to the questions Kent had said he didn't remember Mrs. Hastings and that he didn't know whether he had been tried, but thought he was in jail at Roanoke, 20 miles away.

TORSO MYSTERY CLUES FOUND

International News Service.

PAINESVILLE, O., Sept. 8.—Another gruesome discovery which officials believe may have some connection with the mysterious death of a woman whose headless body was washed ashore on the beach at Cleveland, has been made at North Perry Village, near here.

A portion of a human body was found on the beach by Sheriff Kilcawley.

Acting Coroner Barnett said the bones appeared to be those of a woman. Bits of flesh, which gave evidence of having been preserved, clung to them.

Clear Auto Driver In Death of Girl

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Jack Crown, of New Kensington, driver of an automobile which crashed and killed a Philadelphia girl and injured two University of Pittsburgh students, is free of a manslaughter charge arising from the accident.

CARRIERS PLAN RAIL POLICY

Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Congress probably will be called upon this winter to decide whether the railroad rehabilitation plans of the carriers themselves or of the national administration shall prevail.

This move appeared in the making today as Joseph B. Eastman federal railroad co-ordinator, studied administration plans while the carriers contemplated proposals to band themselves into an institute for co-ordination of the nation's major transportation system.

The two plans are expected to make their appearance in the usual public hearings on proposed legislation, with Congress to decide which of the two—or what parts of either—should be adopted.

It was indicated at Hyde Park that J. J. Pelley, president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, would become head of an unofficial unit of the carriers. Pelley conferred this week with President Roosevelt.

DITMARS BRINGS RARE SNAKE

ON BOARD S. S. NERISSA, en route to New York, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—A young, live bushmaster snake captured in Southern Trinidad, is keeping company aboard this vessel with four vampire bats.

Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars, of the Bronx Zoo, who is elated over his first capture of a live bushmaster in 25 years, believes the specimen is in good condition. He said:

"We are keeping him quiet. He is not being fed during the trip, but is taking water."

The bats also were captured in Trinidad, and will be brought to the zoo.

Tariff Prime Need Speaker Tells Club

Never before has the United States needed the tariff and other protective measures as it does today, James A. Fulton, of McKeesport, student of economics and international trade, told the Henry George Club in the Chamber of Commerce. He spoke on the evolution of tariff. He said:

"Because of depressions trade barriers are essential to prevent the present capital congestion from being greatly intensified by a return of the creditor balance, in whole or in part."

Announcement of the meeting was made yesterday shortly after Mayor George H. Lysle, of McKeesport, refused Communists a permit to hold a meeting in that city next Thursday night.

THREE INDICTED IN BLAST RING

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 8.—(AP.)—Three persons were indicted by the county grand jury today in connection with the theft of nine tons of dynamite from a Newhall powder magazine. Each was charged with suspicion of burglary and receiving stolen property.

Those indicted are William J. Mankers, Fred Sackl and Clyde Phillips, seized by police early in the week, three days before the missing dynamite was found hidden in a warehouse in the heart of the city's residential district.

Police charged a gigantic explosive booting ring has been in operation in California, disposing of stolen dynamite to any who had the money to buy it. Other members of the ring are being sought.

CHAPTER III.

Turning into their own drive, Jasper and Laura saw their son walking across the lawn accompanied by a girl whom Laura identified as "the little acting person—named Martin, or something like that."

"He seems interested," Ingram said.

The way Seward walked, the way he tilted his face to the girl, it would not have been plainer, had he worn a collar and chain, that he was Arline Martin's captive.

"I do hope everything will go off well," Arline was saying. "It will mean so much to me if I can have a real success."

"Of course you'll be a success. I thought you were perfectly great in your rehearsal just now. It's a fine play, and I think the whole thing is going to be a knockout. I know it is!"

"It's sweet of you to be so encouraging," she murmured. Anyway it's helped a lot to see the grounds and all the arrangements. But having you the only member of the family at home, was a bit of luck for me. It's a wonderful spot for an outdoor performance, a sort of natural amphitheater, isn't it?"

"I don't know about the natural part of it. I believe this whole place has been landscaped within an inch of its life. I was awfully glad to show you around, Miss Martin. I wish there was something else I could do—anything I could do, really. You'll let me know if there is, won't you?"

Eyes Beautiful

She nodded her lovely head. She was almost as pretty as she appeared to Seward's dazzled eyes. Beyond the harmony of delicate, well modeled features and appealing curves, beyond the charm of youthful coloring heightened to brilliance by the skillful use of make-up, was the almost startling beauty of her eyes, gray-blue as the depth of Arctic water and the low sun shining through it.

"You can clap, tomorrow," she told him. Their progress, slow as Seward had tried to make it, had brought them to her waiting car. "I shall rely on you to be my personal claque. You know how it's done, don't you? Wait till the rest of the audience is letting up a little and then come in strong—you can nearly always start them up all over again!"

"I sure will," Seward promised. "But it won't be necessary. You'll wow 'em without any help from me!"

Arline gave the handsome boy her best smile as she slid behind the wheel of her roadster. He was Jasper Ingram's son and therefore a conquest of some importance. For Arline Martin was on the make. Beneath the softness and grace of her exterior, she was as ruthlessly ambitious as Ingram himself. Whoever served her purposes was made use of, whoever was not useful, she discarded.

Her temperament made her honestly nervous about her success in the chief clou of a society vaudeville. A clever young actress, not long a professional, she was used to the exaggerated acclaim of her friends—and shrewd enough to discount their enthusiasm. Yet, if even half of what they said was true, there ought to be a future for her.

To appear under Mrs. Ingram's patronage, gave her, by far, the best opportunity to parade her talent she had ever had, for the Ingrams were not merely rich but also decidedly influential in professional circles. Everyone knew that Jasper Ingram was interested in music and the theater. He contributed largely to operatic and noncommercial theater endowments. Who knew but she might interest him? If she played well, anything might happen.

Wins at Bridge

Marian Alspaugh had good cards and good partners that same afternoon. Her winnings, of course, she had to leave behind her for charity, but she still had her hundred dollars. Naturally she would tell Homer she had been cleaned out.

She drove home in high spirits, her way taking her past the long eight-foot wall of the Ingram estate, Grangefields. Passing the wrought-iron gates she took her eyes from the road, drove slowly, and explored all there was to be seen of green velvet lawn, rhododendrons bordering the drive, rose-trellises and planned tree-groupings, a flash of steel that was a glimpse of an artificial lake, and one gable of the distant house. Marion had never been inside those gates, but soon she would know the secret beauties of those guarded grounds!

On the other side of the village, the unfashionable side, lived the Alspaughs. Marian had known no better when she urged Homer to buy that house. She had supposed that since the town was smart, any part of it must be all right. Now she was dissatisfied. They should have bought a place on the water front or at least near the Country Club . . .

"And what would be the point in that, seeing we've never been asked to join the club—" her husband would inquire.

Marian raved at the dumbness of men. "Don't you see, that's exactly why we've never been asked? We live in the wrong section. If we haven't enough money to live where the real people live, it's up to you to make more money! You didn't marry a hausfrau, satisfied to dig in a garden and meet you when you came out on the 5:17. . . . I could be somebody in this town if you'd give me a chance."

Almost Cheerful

But tonight as she drove the car into the garage she was almost cheerful. Even if she did live on the wrong side of the village, it wouldn't be easy for the Country Club crowd to ignore her after it met her at Mrs. Jasper H. Ingram's!

She went into the pink house and into the living room where Homer relaxed in one of the over-stuffed chairs, sat listening to the radio. All the furniture in the room was dressed in summer covers of flowered cretonne. On a refectory table, back of the davenport, were scattered papers and magazines dealing with talking pictures. Copies of Vogue and Harper's Bazaar added an intellectual note. Other furniture included occasional tables and chairs, two bridge lamps, and a bowl of flowers—that needed to be changed. The room was exactly like a million other rooms in American homes. Except for a couple of bright-jacketed novels from a rental library, there was not a book in evidence, nor indeed, barring the cook-book in the kitchen, was there another in the house.

Marian switched off the radio and dropped down on the davenport.

"What shall I wear tomorrow?" she demanded. "That Dutch outfit I had last year?"

"That was cute," Homer said. "Sort of tea-roomy, though. . . . Maybe, I could get a Columbine costume, have the skirt mostly ribbons and short, show my legs as we used to . . ." She said, "it would be all right to wear a summer dress. If I could run into town first thing in the morning and find something terribly chic and really good, maybe all those rich women would think more of me."

"No, the more I think of it, the more I feel a grande dame effect is what I should try for—meeting all those Country Club people for the first time at Mrs. Ingram's . . . Considering how important it is, I guess you'll have to let me have some more money, Homer! I saw a dress in a Fifth avenue store the other day, perfectly plain georgette in dull pink, with the new sleeves and a high neckline——"

Synopsis

Success crowned every venture of Jasper Ingram, wealthy promoter. Millions were at his disposal much to the envy of Homer Alspaugh, his confidential secretary, who has all he can do to meet mortgage payments and the gold-digging demands of his flirtatious wife, Marian. Cathleen McCarthy, beautiful young stenographer, substitutes for Ingram's secretary while the latter is on vacation. Visiting her husband's office, Laura Ingram meets Marian Alspaugh and, realizing she is the type who can wheedle money out of men, asks Marian to be cigaret girl at a charity garden party. Laura had been a middle-class girl and marriage to Ingram represented security; to Ingram, his wife was the coolly selected instrument for a purpose he had at heart.

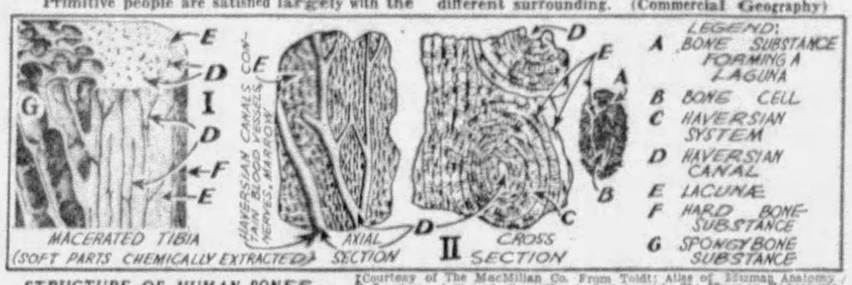
INDIANS WEAVING CLOTH—MILLING FLOUR—PARALYTIC DIRECTS BLIND

Natural characteristics determine largely the type of livelihood of a population within an area. Climate and soil conditions guide the farmer; mineral resources induce mining enterprises; sea coasts, lakes, rivers invite shipping. All activities boost traffic, necessitating roads, railways to connect regions of origin of commodities with places of processing and final consumption.

Primitive people are satisfied largely with the yield of their land, produced and processed by primitive means. Yet to gain better results, they have some specialization of labor. The man does the building, hunting, the woman crushes the grain, prepares the meal, weaves the clothing, etc.

When the blind Arab tied to his back the paralytic who could not move, but could see to direct him, he divided labor to alleviate a handicap otherwise fatal to both in a primitive, socially indifferent surrounding. (Commercial Geography)



STRUCTURE OF HUMAN BONES

Courtesy of The MacMillan Co. From Toldt: Atlas of Human Anatomy. Courtesy of Ginn & Co. (Hough & Sedgewich: The Human Mechanism)

The surface of a bone is covered with a layer of connective tissue cells, called periosteum, supplied with blood vessels which extend to all parts of the bone. The periosteum unites the bone with the ligaments (strong straps holding the bones together) and tendons (tough tissues connecting the muscles). Beneath the periosteum is the bone substance (substantia ossea) which is partially solid (substantia compacta) or loosely structured (substantia spongiosa), both built by bone cells in minute spaces, lacunae. The solid bone substance contains numerous tubules, the Haversian canals, filled with blood vessels, nerves, marrow. The loosely structured bone-substance, as well as the central cavity of the tubular bones are filled with red and yellow marrow, organs forming blood cells. (Biol.)

RELATION OF ELECTRICITY AND MATTER—ELECTRONS, PROTONS

Dalton conceived the atom as the smallest particle of matter (1807). Crookes (1879) and Thompson (1897), experimenting with tubes containing highly rarified gases—with sealed-in electrodes between which electricity was discharged—observed glowing of the tube walls. This was due to the radiation emitted from the cathode (—electrode) toward the anode (+ electrode). The rays were called cathode rays and found to consist of minute particles, charges of negative electricity, named electrons. As these were similar regardless of the composition of the cathode used, it was concluded that electrons must be constituents of all matter.

The atom is normally neutral, as it contains also protons (particles of positive electricity) in equal number to that of electrons. (A-A-IV-L)

"GERAINT...SHORE THROUGH THE SWARTHY NECK"—VIVIEN APPLIES CHARM TO MERLIN

Gareth and Lynette (1872), the second of Tennyson's "Idylls of the King," presents Alfred's Court in its early days narrating the romance of the two. Gareth, a youthful knight, liberates Lyonors, Lynette's sister, from besieging knights.

The third idyll, "Geraint and Enid" (1859), deals with the unfounded jealousy of Knight Geraint toward his wife Enid. She, answering indignity, cruelty with devotion to him in his encounters, vindicates herself.

The fourth idyll, "Balin and Balan" (1885), pictures honest but violent Balin, who, when catching a glimpse of the intrigue between Queen Guinevere and Lancelot, tears the queen's crown from his shield. Mistaken by his brother Balan for a demon for whom he searched, Balin is attacked; both die.

"Merlin and Vivien" (1859) is the fifth idyll. Merlin is the enchanter who received Arthur from a great wave and educated him. Wily Vivien's father was killed in a fight against Arthur, whose court in revenge she is determined to undermine. She accompanies Merlin, extracts only to apply it by closing him from him the secret of a charm forever in an oak tree. (Eng.Lit.)

DIAMOND—PURE CRYSTALLINE CARBON

Diamond is pure crystalline carbon (forms related to octahedron or cube), found mostly in South Africa, Australia, Brazil and recently in Arkansas, U. S. Cut and ground as "brilliant," it is the gem of high internal light reflection, "fire" (above). Its specific gravity is 3.5; it resists chemicals; at high temperature it combines with oxygen to CO_2. It is brittle, the hardest mineral, scratched only by boron carbide (B_6C).

Faulty crystals, called bortz, and the black amorph variety, the carbonado (just as hard but less brittle), are used as industrial diamonds for tools to shape tough material (glass, grindstones, rubber, bakelite, etc.) and to drill rock.

JUNIOR PATROL MAIL BOX

We surely hope every Junior Patrol member loves his mother and father and that they love him.

In a family, it just isn't right, if the parents and the children aren't all the best friends in the world with one another. And every child ought to live in a happy home.

Maybe your folks aren't rich. Maybe they don't live in a big, swell house. That doesn't mean you can't all be happy with each other. And do favors for one another.

A boy and his dad ought to be real pals just as much as they can. And a girl and her dad ought to be chums, too. And both a son and a daughter ought to love their mother all the time. Maybe that's why we thought this letter from Jane Cooper, of 646 Curtis street, Mt. Washington, is such a good one. It won second prize, too.

"There are lots of great men in this world—President Roosevelt, Col. Lindbergh and Eddie Cantor, but I only see them in pictures and read about them. But I see my Daddy every day and I think he's the greatest man in the world. He reads the funnies to me and laughs when I do. He takes me to see Mickey Mouse and enjoys it. He hears my lessons and is very patient. When Mother says, 'No birthday party this year,' Daddy says, 'Now, now, don't you remember when you were 7?' So I love my Daddy and think him a great man because he hasn't forgotten what it is like to be a little girl like me."

Here's a letter we got the other day from Milton Swartz:

"I thank you very much for sending my membership card and button. I will try to organize a little club of my own and get a captain's card."

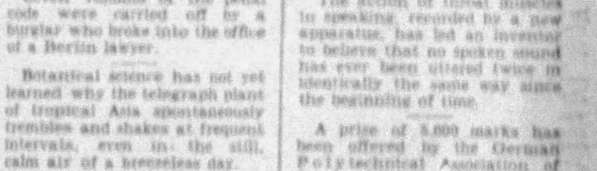
Some More About Pickens

Speaking of Bill Pickens yesterday we realize we could do that all year round.

Stepping into a newspaper office Bill always concentrated on the copyboys. He knew that five or 10 years later those copyboys would be editors. He planned years ahead except in his own racket. That lived from day to day and Bill had to use giant swings to keep it going.

He did anything legitimate or otherwise for publicity. One thing he got mixed up in got him plenty. But, fortunately it didn't jail. Otherwise, the Wright brothers would have lost their correct laurels as pioneers of the air.

After the Wrights had soared at Kitty Hawk others stepped in and tried to smash their ears. The interlopers claimed that the Wrights were not the first heavier-than-air pilots. In the effort to pulverize these authentic brothers the gale crashers said their patents were secondary to the Langley Aerdrome.



The Langley boiler had never flown with a man in it. It had never flown any further than a wet turtle. Once it had been catapulted from a wharf into the Potomac. But if anybody could prove that it could really fly, it would be an important peg to hang a lawyer's hat on.

So Pickens tried to borrow the Langley junrack from the Smithsonian Institution. Failing in that, he built an exact duplicate of it, and took it up to Hammondsport or some place in New York state that sounds like that. And, he got pictures of it in the air.

He didn't tell anybody that he had to lower his photographer down a well to get the snaps. That's how he did it. They trundled the Langley twin over a hole in the ground and the man in the mine snapped the picture.

So far as actual flying was concerned, a grasshopper could do better with a Kansas farmer on his back.

And with all of Pickens' ability, they failed to stand up in legal competition. However, Pickens got his publicity out of the stunt and then took his trick aviators back into the jungle towns.

We think the name of the place was Hammondtownport. That sounds a little long. But you can place it because there's where they stored ten million bottles of American champagne during the 14 dry years.

If you can find one champagne cork up there now, that's the place. Bill and myself drank them all up while we were checking on his yarns.

Steam Shovels or Men?

The Advisability of Using Labor-Saving Machines On Relief Jobs Is Questioned

Sir Joshua Stamp, a director of the Bank of England, expressed concern Thursday in an address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, lest the continued invention of labor-saving machines wreck the whole economic order. What we need, he said, is labor-creating inventions. Pittsburgh can point to its Mellon Institute of Industrial Research as an organization that is helping to fill this need.

It is interesting to recall that early in the depression a committee of the British Liberal Party, composed of David Lloyd George, the Marquess of Lothian, and B. Seebohm Rowntree, were so impressed by the Mellon Institute's labor-creating inventions that in a report on "How to Tackle Unemployment," published in 1930, they recommended that the government take the initiative in establishing a similar institution in Great Britain.

Sir Joshua Stamp's anxiety over the effect of labor-displacing machines on the economic order is of special interest to Pittsburgh because of a grievance that was laid before City Council on Wednesday. It was stated that in carrying out the public works program for the relief of the unemployed during the last two years the city spent almost as much in renting steam shovels as it disbursed in wages.

Employment could have been given to hundreds of additional men, it is argued, if manual labor had been used instead of steam shovels. The Public Works Department, more concerned with getting its jobs well and quickly done than with philanthropy, takes the position that pick and shovel work is distressingly inefficient and tedious, as compared with what can be done by steam shovels. It is a point worth considering.

Consideration should also be given, however, to the demoralizing effect of extending unadulterated public charity to multitudes of men instead of giving them a chance to earn wages. We have on public relief in Allegheny County at the present time 216,185 persons, divided into 62,153 families. With so many in this plight, no shame attaches to it, of course; but there must be numerous persons in the list whose self-respect would be bolstered if they could render some sort of service, if only by pick and shovel work, in return for their relief dole.

There is danger, too, that, if long supported in idleness by the taxpayers, some of the unemployed of flabby character will become contented with their condition, lose all inclination to work, and come to feel that they are entitled to a life of sloth at the taxpayers' expense. Food for thought is furnished by the Pennsylvania Security League's statement that "if those persons who are giving relief think they are Santa Clauses to the unemployed, they misread the temper of the unemployed."

The Legislature will meet in special session next week to impose new burdens on the taxpayers of Pennsylvania to provide for the relief of the unemployed. It would be no more than natural if the taxpayers should feel that they are entitled to some service from the unemployed in return. And if the pick and shovel work of men on the relief list will save the taxpayers the expense of renting steam shovels, why not use it, at least on jobs where speed is not urgent?

To revert to Sir Joshua Stamp's remark that what we need is labor-creating inventions: What he meant, of course, was inventions like the automobile and the radio. The automobile has been a godsend to Pittsburgh as a job-provider. The revival in the auto industry in the early part of the year resulted, for example, in the placing of orders for springs with some mills at Coraopolis that had been shut down for a long while, and hundreds of idle men in that section of the county were given employment.

Pittsburgh steel mills, electric, air brake and lamp companies, sand, gravel and cement dealers, glass and aluminum works would have had much less work in recent years if the automobile had not been invented, and brought with it the construction of good roads. (Pittsburgh will suffer a loss of business in Henry Ford's decision to build and operate his own steel mills at Detroit.) The invention of the radio, too, has furnished employment to multitudes of Pittsburghers who might otherwise have been out of work.

*But since these and the other labor-creating in*ventions of the last few decades are no longer sufficient to provide all the jobs that the population requires, it is necessary to try to find new industries. Fortunately for Pittsburgh, there is now in prospect a new industry—the manufacture of machine-made homes—that should give a great deal of business to local steel mills and jobs to many Pittsburghers.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the General Motors Corporation, discusses this prospective new industry in an impressive article in the September Atlantic Monthly. Every Pittsburgh businessman should read the article, and the Chamber of Commerce and other trade bodies in the Pittsburgh district should be on the alert to take advantage of the opportunities the new industry will afford.

As showing the possibilities that Mr. Sloan visualizes, it will suffice to say that it is estimated that with mass production a small house, the equivalent in size of a present-day workingman's cottage, can be fabricated, erected in three days, furnished, air-conditioned, equipped with all modern conveniences for reducing housework, and also with special devices such as the teletype for news dispatches, television apparatus and a radio set—all this for considerably less than the cost of erecting a wooden house, unfurnished!

You have heard of Hindu fakirs, circus freaks and others who can pierce their flesh with needles, pins and knives without feeling pain. Scientific investigations reveal that a strong will power can "short circuit" the nervous system so that the brain receives no warning from the wound. There is an article on the subject in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly, the magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

Mickey Mouse and a party of friends have been camping. On breaking camp they find that the battery of their automobile is dead. How the difficulty of making their car go was solved forms the subject of an amusing series of sketches by Walt Disney in Puck, the Comic Weekly Section of tomorrow's Sun Telegraph.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—It is 3 a. m. and sleep is fugitive. A big chair at the window is inviting. In front of the Park Lane a taxi driver is hunched over a tabloid, the only wisp of human life within eye range. The break of dawn offers a rare moment for introspection—to talk to one's self.

Awareness is tingling in the dead, black hours. Somewhere a ship is in trouble at sea. Somewhere the first faint cry of life. Life, death, life, death. Like a tick-tock-tack. One morning at a. m. I stood in front of the Phillips House in Dayton, O., broke, jobless, hungry.

To go home or stick it out was the question. Pride wins most our battles and I stuck it out. Later I used to go to that corner and bestow an affectionate self approval. A good old boy, huzzah! It's stimulating to cheer one's self on now and then. That is faith, the mountain-moving faith.

There was the bartender with the lion tamer's roach at Kramer and Bell's in Kansas City. With his diamond screw-pin stud, highly glossed white shirts and serpent-head ring with greenstone eyes, he seemed abreast of life and stepping high. People called him Nick. He came from Australia and was the first person I ever heard say "Very good, sir!" with mounting inflection. He would say to me: "What'll it be Guv-ner?" Nobody has ever made me feel as important as Nick. I was 19.

Dolly De Shay sang in an Over-the-Rhine concert hall in Cincinnati. She was brazenly maewestish. A glad girl. Hair chemically yellow, buxom, and a bright gold tooth. She blew kisses to roysterers at soggy tables ringed with many glasses. One Sunday I saw her driving in a Stanhope in Eden Park with a pasty-faced and weazened runt. He wore a white silk shirt with a big breast-pocket monogram in purple. They said he was her man. They exuded a sinister gloss I never forgot. I was 21.

In East Liverpool, O., there was a handsome young Irish copper Hughie McDermott—he's the commissioner now I believe—kind to me when I was on the $15-a-week police beat there for a morning paper. One wintry night some toughs were dusting up around the pottery kilns. I went with Hughie. He waded into a nest of them and mowed them down. I stood on a lumber pile and watched. Back at headquarters he said: "McIntyre and I cleaned them up." The story got around I was handy with my dukes. Rival reporters thawed a bit. I took to talking a little out of the side of my mouth. I was 23.

Life's most thrilling moment I think was coming out of the Pennsylvania station in the noonday sunshine for the first glimpse of New York. The excitement of that ride over Thirty-fourth street and up the avenue of avenues atop a swaying green bus. They were lunching at the flower boxed windows of the great Waldorf. Near the library I saw Caruso in an ensemble of green. In front of Delmonico's a cavalier was helping Nora Bayes—no less—into a hansom. On the portico of the old Savoy I saw silver champagne buckets flashing at the table side. Here was the top of the world. I was 24.

who talked Brooklynese. Literary figures I never expected to see, drifting to other offices—Bob Davis, Rex Beach, Harris Merton Lyon, Rheta Childe Dorr, Fannie Hurst, James Montgomery Flagg, James Oppenheim, Isaac Marcosson. The luncheon table at Keene's in the West 30's. McGraw's billiard parlor and the flashy sports who hung out there. And the day Ray Long and I came breezily back from lunch to find glum bailiffs sitting around. All out of jobs again. I was still 24.

A wan light streaks the darkling day. I hear the daily diapasons from many kitchens. The dog, in waking-up bewilderment, comes in sleepily to stretch and roll. The elevator man in the back, a ringer for David Warfield, even to dialect, leaves something or other outside the door. There's a windy telegram, too, from S. Jay Kaufman and Robert Reud rainbowing a new theatrical promise. Today I'm old enough to know better than to sit blinking toward a sun-up trying to write airy prosits to days agone!

HUMAN SIDE OF NEWS

By Edwin C. Hill

THERE has been heavy mortality among the old-time political bosses of recent years. The death of William S. Vare, of Philadelphia, leaves another gap in their thinning ranks. New bosses rise, of course, but they are not of the old heavy-fisted genus. They use a rapier rather than a bludgeon.

This writer has come in contact with quite a few of these lusty and usually likable old buccaneers—at national conventions, at Washington, at clam-bakes and longshoremen's picnics, at brass-rail lineups, and once in a while he has caught a few back room monosyllables from some of them which have made a front-page column.

Nast, Opper and Davenport have made an enduring rubber-stamp of the political boss which is still his graphic symbol—gross, heavy-jowled, paunchy and predatory—but that isn't the whole story.

With no idea of trying to square whatever proven larceny may lie in this domain, it has been my observation that the children of darkness are indeed wiser than the children of light, and usually a whole lot more human. Through the years, I began to observe that they did not have hoofs and horns; that most of them were family men; that, on the whole, they sought power rather than money. Many a young broker riding a rise in boom times has made more money than many of the notorious bosses.

* * *

Roger Sullivan A Likable Man

THE late Roger Sullivan, of Illinois, was perhaps the most humanly likable of the lot of them—humorous, imaginative and a bit of a d'Artagnan in his quest for high adventure. Even his political enemies liked him. His memory serves to point up the error of those free and easy groupings and classifications to which we so easily resort.

I have known political bosses who were stolid squareheads; some who were lean and Machiavellian; some who were as lusty trenchermen as old Beowolf gnawing a bone, and others who were monkish and abstemious; sensualists and aesthetes; joiners and recluses; the inscrutable dead-pan boss and the boss who gets chummy the first time you meet him.

Tom Platt, who died in 1911, was never known to have made any money out of his decades of political manipulation. Like many others—most of them, one might say—he shoved ahead and gained his place at a moment when his party was weak and discouraged. He maintained iron discipline. A subtle strategist, he kept his amateur standing. That is, there was a sort of artistic detachment in his deft fingers, weaving delicate strands of power, rather than reaching out for loot. It was under the tutelage of the skilled Roscoe Conkling that he became a practitioner of the art of roping and hog-tieing opponents with silken threads.

There you have the smooth urbanite, and here you have the big, red-faced, curly-haired, blonde, blue-eyed and good natured Tom Taggart, of Indiana, the Irish immigrant boy who became a boss of bosses. Tom Taggart died March 7, 1929. He, too, was one of the most likable of bosses, mixed up in much rough-and-tumble milling, but he always fought under Queensbury rules, and there never was a cloud on his integrity. It was an unique triumvirate which used to meet and write various Democratic slates at that old French Lick hotel.

* * *

Penrose Came From Upper Class

Taggart had started life in Indiana as a newsboy. He later was a waiter, then a restaurant and hotel owner, in politics with his first pair of long pants. He was supposed to have left about $2,000,000 when he died at the age of 72, after four decades of political sovereignty. He had a legitimate accounting for his wealth, in his various business enterprises. It was the love of power which had driven him to his political throne.

Most of the bosses were commoners, battling their way up with a bung-starter. The late Boies Penrose, whose suzerainty was the state of Pennsylvania, was one of the few exceptions. Of a highly placed family, brilliantly educated, an alumnus of Harvard, he buttressed his career with wealth and social prestige, but in his methods and his objectives, he was not essentially different from the others. He knew what he wanted and he went after it and got it.

A bit cynical, somewhat of a Nietzschean, he knew by vote what many of the others knew by ear. And like all the others, he survived and prospered by always having a knockout punch in reserve.

Apropos of a certain writer, someone remarked, "He talks like Emma Goldman and writes like Kuhn, Loeb & Co." So the bosses. They look and talk this way and that—subject to all human variants—but they all work alike. They swing from the heel when that becomes expedient.

On Liberty

It Begins to Go Out of Fashion in the World

By H. L. MENCKEN

FROM the end of the Seventeenth Century to the outbreak of the World War there was a steady widening of human liberties everywhere.

If the movement may be said to have begun with the adoption of the English Bill of Rights in 1689, then it lasted precisely 225 years. It was not confined to the United States or to Europe; it extended to all parts of the world, and it affected the most remote and primitive peoples.

But with the outbreak of the war in 1914 it was definitely halted, and now the wind is plainly blowing in the other direction.

The extent to which we have slipped backward in the United States is apparently little realized by most Americans.

They have heard somewhat vaguely about their own Bill of Rights, and they assume that it is still in force, but the truth is that no less than nine of its ten articles are now virtually obsolete. All nine have been invaded at one time or other by legislative usurpation or executive encroachment, and on almost every occasion the courts have refused to intervene.

THERE was a time when the higher judges spent most of their time telling legislators and bureaucrats what they could not do, but of late they have devoted themselves mainly to finding excuses for what has been done.

A great many bold forays upon the Bill of Rights were made under cover of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act.

It was quickly found that enforcing prohibition would be impossible so long as the inalienable rights of the citizen were respected, for prohibition was itself a gross invasion of those rights. But the dry fanatics, with all branches of the government under their control, did not let that difficulty stay them.

Instead, they urged the lawmakers to ever more oppressive measures, and the prohibition agents to ever more impudent invasions of the Bill of Rights, and in nearly every case the docile courts tortured both the law and the facts to condone the outrage.

Under the influence of the spy mania and other such hysterias, laws were passed that clearly and grossly violated the Bill of Rights, but in nearly every case the courts hastened to sustain them.

There was, to be sure, a moment of sober second thought when the war was over, and a few of the lost rights were restored. But soon they were flouted again by prohibition, and when prohibition in its turn passed out there began a wholesale invasion of them in the name of various social and economic experiments, some of them intelligible and some not.

AS everyone knows, what is in progress here is also in progress everywhere else, and often in an exaggerated manner.

The peoples of Western Europe enjoyed wide and inalienable liberties before the war, and those liberties were increasing, but now most of them have no more liberty than so many convicts in a house of correction.

In many countries, once free and civilized, they have even lost the elemental rights to vote, to have their say about the reigning politicians, and to petition for a redress of their grievances.

Their only remaining freedom is the poor privilege of obeying and applauding the orders of the mountebanks who have seized dominion over them.

WHAT is to be done about it? There is one way out, and one way only.

"God grants liberty," said Daniel Webster a century ago, "only to those who love it, and are always ready to guard and defend it."

The peoples of the western world, debauched by idiotic phrases, have allowed frauds and fools to make serious inroads upon their most precious heritage, but if they rise in their might and demand the return of what they have lost they will get it back.

It cannot be done all at once, but it can be done.

The time to begin is not tomorrow, or next day, or on the return of "normalcy," but NOW.

EVERY day there is some fresh encroachment upon the Bill of Rights, some new outrage upon the free citizen.

Let the next one be challenged the instant it is attempted, and there will be a turn in the tide.

Let the next tin-pot Caesar hear a vociferous no, and the whole race of bogus world-savers will be more careful hereafter.

"They that can give up essential liberty," said Benjamin Franklin, "to obtain a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety."

Once the first goes, the second always follows it. But so long as the first is inviolable, the second remains real.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Try to Be Your Other Self

Ever grow tired of being "Just Yourself"? Ever wish you could be one of those glamorous creatures you follow through book or screen? Then why not be a Different Self? Why go on living in the same drab shell of life?

You can, of course, be an entirely different person. Without moving away from the place where you now live, without working at a different job, without possessing a dollar more money, you can still be an entirely different person.

You weren't born to be the person you are. You have in you the Makings of many different personalities. You might have become almost any sort of a person you wished. You may still develope new Selves of whose existence you do not now dream—experience new sensations which have never entered your comprehension.

I often think of a woman I knew very well. Bred in a New England environment, she had become a sort of gray and white person. Her manners were prim, her disposition cool and controlled, her days lacking in excitement, her home—though restful—entirely colorless.

When I first knew her she was about 27, a pallid, mousy woman who already seemed 40. She dressed, habitually, in soft browns, grays and black, made with extreme simplicity by a rather old-fashioned pattern. Everything she did or had was good, but monotonously practical and plain.

At about this time another woman, returning from Europe, gave her a dress. It was a Paris model which the traveler had bought for herself, but having grown stouter, was unable to wear. A gorgeous thing, but entirely unsuitable, we thought, for my friend.

For one thing, it was an evening dress, and she never went out in the evenings. Besides, the material and cut were fantastic—a magnificent velvet, heavy and glowing as molten metal, of a rich wine color. It was made in a strange gypsy fashion—the skirt flowing in great folds from the tight bodice, which was encrusted in dull gold.

My friend stared aghast as we opened the box and the glorious garment spilled across the table, flaunting its exotic splendor in a quiet, shadowed room.

"Did you ever see anything so ridiculous?" she cried. "Imagine me wearing a think like that!"

Still smiling, she slipped it on—and we both stood breathless. She was transfigured! Against that rich beauty her mousy hair was pale gilt, her skin the creamy texture of a magnolia, her eyes dark, brooding pools. The change was incredible! Another Self had emerged—a Self neither of us had seen before!

That one adventure into beauty released a whole new personality—a vivid, passionate personality, hungry for color and music—reaching eagerly toward all the lovely abundance of life.

Yet she was not really a new person. That other self had been locked within her all those years.

There is just another self locked in each one of us. Adventuring selves—romantic selves—braver, lovelier, livelier selves than the world has ever seen. Each human being is a treasure chest of undeveloped Selves.

Why do we go on, year after year, wearing drab personalities when a we might swagger through life like jeweled Kings and Queens?
